Preferred Citation

Biographical / Historical

Hope Leroy Baumgartner was born on August 6, 1891 in Rochester, Indiana. He spent most of his life at Yale School of Music; he received the B.M. degree in 1916, and he was a member of the faculty from 1919 until his retirement in 1960. Baumgartner was an active organist and composer during those years, in addition to fulfilling his duties as a professor of composition and music theory. He composed in a variety of genres, but specialized in sacred music. Baumgartner died in Hamden, Connecticut on September 18, 1969.

Scope and Contents

The H. Leroy Baumgartner Papers contain sketches, manuscript scores, and published editions of Baumgartner’s musical compositions, including songs, choral music, keyboard works, and chamber music. The Papers also hold programs, articles by Baumgartner, and notes by the composer giving background information about his music.

The award in this competition was not made until the Exposition was about to end, and my entry received no prize or mention. Publication came eventually in 1935, and I heard no complete performance until it was done in 1956 by the New Haven Chorale under David Kraehenbuehl. I conducted the choir of the Church of the Redeemer in several church performances of #4 after the five choruses were issued separately. Above note written in April, 1966.” |

This song was later arranged for SSA with piano, and #2 and #3 were, composed for this combination. The group was sung twice, I believe, by the Hamden Music Club Chorus, under my direction. The arrangement for TTBB was made after the SSA version, but it was never sung. I believe both choral versions were submitted for publication, but neither was ever published. About 30 manuscript reproductions of the SSA version were still in existence in April, 1966. See one of the cartons containing orchestra parts and performing reproductions of unpublished works.”</td>

| b. 2, f. 5 | String Quartet in C, Opus 23
  sketches
  pencil holograph score
  set of parts
  “Some fragmentary sketches for a String Quartet in C. There were probably many others which were thrown away. Although a pencil score (for the four movements) was completed, and the parts were copied in ink, no complete ink score was ever made, partly because I felt, after hearing the piece tried-out in a private reading, that it was not very successful as a whole. Some parts I like, and others I found disappointing. I never found time to make a thorough-going revision although I started several times. Perhaps it is just as well that no more time was spent on this piece since it probably had too many styles in it to make a unified whole. The plan for the piece was just too involved for me to handle successfully at the time when it was undertaken. I doubt that I could do any thing very much better with this material now, and I am sure I should not want to try. May 2, 1966.”
  “Additional note: Chronologically this quartet should have had a lower number than 23. The probable reason why it does not have a lower number is that I held it out for revision for a period of years (while other pieces were being written) and finally decided that it was hardly worth re-working.” |
