Biographical / Historical

The papers in this collection were gathered at Andover Newton Theological Seminary and transferred to the Yale Divinity School Library in 2017 when Andover Newton became affiliated with Yale Divinity School. Andover Newton traces its roots to the early 1800s and the desire to prepare a well-educated clergy among both Congregationalist and Baptists. With the 1778 founding of Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts, and the establishment of a separate department of divinity in 1807, the Andover Theological Seminary was created. Instruction at the southern Merrimack River Valley campus continued until 1907, when the trustees decided to move the school to the urban setting of Cambridge, Massachusetts, to broaden the curriculum and establish closer ties with the academic world. In 1908, plans for a formal affiliation with Harvard Divinity School were started, but merger attempts resulted in a legal struggle over adherence to Andover's founding principles.

The move to Cambridge left the school with a dwindling enrollment. In 1931, at the invitation of the Newton Theological Institution, Andover relocated to Newton Centre. In 1965, the two schools formally merged, forming the Andover Newton Theological School.

Judson, Adoniram

Adoniram Judson was born in Malden, Massachusetts, August 8, 1788. He graduated from Brown University in 1807 and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1810. While at Andover, he became a member of a student group, The Brethren, which was organized to encourage interest in the foreign missions movement. He was a leader of the group of students who petitioned the General Association of Massachusetts for financial support in missionary work, a move which later resulted in the formation of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. In 1811 he was appointed one of the first five missionaries sent from the United States. He married Ann Hasseltine, February 5, 1812, and the following day was ordained at Tabernacle Church in Salem. Later that month Adoniram and Ann left for India with Samuel and Harriet Newell. During the voyage Judson studied the question of baptism. After further study of the issue in India, the Judsons became convinced of the validity of the Baptist tenet of believer baptism; and both Adoniram and Ann were baptized by English missionaries. After months of frustration in dealing with authorities of the East India Company and after a brief layover in the Isle of France, the Judsons finally arrived in Burma in 1813 under the sponsorship of Baptists in the United States. Judson's entire missionary service was in Burma. In addition to published works on baptism and the missionary cause, Judson is well known for a translation of the Bible into the Burmese language and publication of an English-Burmese dictionary. The Burmese -English portion of the dictionary was unfinished at the time of his death, and was completed by Edward A. Stevens, a missionary colleague. In April, 1850, Judson died during a sea voyage.

Novotny, Daniel
English

Daniel Novotny (11 Jun 1926 - 18 Oct 2001) was a United Church of Christ (UCC) minister who served churches in Goshen CT, Exeter, NH, Bridgewater, MA, and Belmont MA. Both he and his wife, Jean, were graduates of Union Theological Seminary. He is a co-author of The Art of Theological Reflection: An Ecumenical Study (Lanham, MD: University Press of America, 1987) along with Ronald Gariboldi; Jean Novotny edited the volume. In retirement in the 1990s, the couple lived at Andover Newton Theological Seminary, where Jean worked in Field Education and Dan served as chaplain and taught some courses.

Novotny had an interesting relationship with the author Madeleine L'Engle. In a review of Sarah Arthur's biography of L'Engle, Jeffrey Johnson writes: "In the early 1950s, as L'Engle pursued her literary ambition, she moved with her family from New York City, where she and her husband worked in the theater business, to Goshen, Connecticut. From an old farmhouse of "charming confusion," L'Engle parented her young children, operated a general store, and tried to kick-start her literary career. Early in this spiritually and vocationally unsettled period, she confessed to a Congregational minister that she did not believe in God but she found it impossible to live as if she did not believe in God. In spite of this comment—or perhaps on account of it—the minister asked L'Engle to teach Sunday school" ("The spirit of Madeleine L'Engle," Christian Century, May 23, 2019). That minister was Daniel Novotny.
