CALL NUMBER: MS 313

CREATOR: Kimball, Chase, 1902-

TITLE: Chase Kimball papers

DATES: 1906-1971

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 28.75 linear feet (41 boxes)

LANGUAGE: English

SUMMARY: The papers consist of correspondence, minutes, reports, organizational and financial records, speeches, topical files, notes, and printed literature documenting Chase Kimball's participation in some thirty-five national and local social, political, and religious organizations, primarily concerned with international peace and justice, and also with civic improvement in Connecticut and especially Waterbury. Since Kimball was active in or received literature from nearly all peace organizations between 1930 and 1939, the Kimball papers are a full record of the literature and ephemera produced and are a source of information on fund-raising and other organizing activities and on the tensions created in the peace movement by differences in intellectual approaches and organizing strategies. Extensive files exist for the American Friends Service Committee, the Connecticut Council on International Relations, the Connecticut Peace Conference, the Emergency Peace Campaign, the International Peace Campaign, the League of Nations Associations, the National Council for Prevention of War, the Waterbury Council for Peace Action, and the Young Men's Christian Association. Major correspondents include Devere Allen, Nathaniel Horton Batchelder, Clark Eichelberger, Lewis Fox, Paul Harris, Florence Kitchelt, Laura Puffer Morgan, Rachel Nason, Frederic Smedley, Horace Dutton Taft, and Wayne Womer.

Biographical / Historical

Chase Kimball was born on January 20, 1902, in Waterbury, Connecticut. He was a lawyer and banker in Waterbury and was active in local and civic and peace organizations. Kimball graduated from Yale College in 1925 and received an LL.B. from the Yale Law School in 1928. He returned to Waterbury in 1931 to practice law and to take charge of the trust department of the Waterbury National Bank. An advocate of international peace and justice in the 1930s, Kimball served as vice-president of the Connecticut branch of the League of Nations Association, treasurer of the Connecticut Council on International Relations, and chairman for peace of the Fifth Congressional District of Connecticut. He participated both locally and nationally in a number of peace organizations. Kimball was also active in the Connecticut Council of Churches, the National Civil Service Reform League, the Y.M.C.A., and the Mission Council of Congregational Churches. Following World War II, he completed a Ph.D. at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and taught international law at various universities. He married Mary Lee Evans in 1942, and they had three children. Kimball died in Milton, Massachusetts, on June 4, 1977.

Scope and Contents

The Chase Kimball Papers document Chase Kimball's participation in some twenty-five national and local, social, political, and religious organizations, and are an especially valuable source of information on the peace movement in America in the 1930s and on civic improvement in Waterbury, Connecticut. Because Kimball was personally involved in or collected literature from all peace organizations between 1930 and 1939, the Kimball Papers comprise an illuminating record of tensions in the peace movement caused by differences in intellectual approaches and organizing strategies.

The correspondence, Minutes, reports, organizational and financial records, speeches, printed ephemera, and topical files which compose the papers were given to the Yale University Library by Chase Kimball between 1946 and 1951. They are arranged in four series much as Kimball organized his files originally:

Series I, ORGANIZATIONS, is the largest series in the papers and contains the correspondence, organizational and financial records, minutes, reports, and printed matter that Kimball collected for each organization in which he participated. Most organizations represented in the series are in some way related to international justice or the peace movement of the 1930s, but a few files document Kimball's other voluntary activities on behalf of religious and civic groups in Waterbury and throughout Connecticut.

Kimball played a direct role in several of the peace organizations represented in the series. The most voluminous records are those for the League of Nations Association and its Connecticut affiliate. Since Kimball served as vice-president of the Connecticut chapter and as a member of the disarmament committee of the national association, the files, through minutes, correspondence, and reports, show the planning and administration of various organizing and educational campaigns and projects. Similarly, since Kimball served as treasurer of the Connecticut Council on International Relations and as a member of the International Relations Committee of the Connecticut Council of Churches, there are files documenting the activities of these local organizations. The development and projects of the Waterbury Council for Peace Action are also well documented as are its ties to the Connecticut Peace Conference.

Kimball described himself as the chairman for peace of Connecticut's fifth congressional district and worked in this capacity with many other peace groups including the Emergency Peace Campaign, the National Council for Prevention of War, and, though he was not a pacifist or a Quaker, with the American Friends Service Committee. For these organizations there is much printed material as well as correspondence and project files. From other peace organizations, such as the International Peace Campaign and the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, Kimball merely saved the printed material he received, but at least for the International Peace Campaign the files represent a rather complete rum of printed material.

The ORGANIZATIONS series also documents Kimball's work in other civic and religious groups. The files for the Connecticut Merit System Association and the National Civil Service Reform League reflect Kimball's interest in the "good government" movement. There are also extensive files for Kimball's work with the Young Men's Christian Association and in the Congregational Church.

Series II, SELECT CORRESPONDENCE, is composed of Kimball's correspondence with leaders in the peace movement, both nationally and in Connecticut, and with some Connecticut political figures with whom Kimball had substantive exchanges. Like Kimball many of these correspondents were active participants in more than one peace organization. Therefore, correspondence in this series includes discussions of more general concerns, while correspondence left in Series I concerns specifically the organization under which it is filed. The series includes some correspondence with the two most prominent women in the Connecticut peace campaign, Florence Kitchelt and Rachel Nason. The series also reflects the important role that volunteers and the organization of volunteers played in the peace movement.

Series III, GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE, contains the routine correspondence that Kimball received and generated particularly in his peace movement and political organizing activities. The correspondence is composed of requests for literature, form letters, fund raising requests, and incidental items received from regional peace organizations outside Connecticut. Occasional letters to politicians are also filed here.

Series IV, TOPICAL FILES, contains background material in the form of correspondence, notes, lists, and printed material, mainly on subjects related to Kimball's peace work such as neutrality, economic sanctions, and the like. The largest amount of material in the series concerns the general organization of peace work and peace workers in Connecticut in different years for congressional campaigns and in various localities. The series also includes some material used by Kimball in preparation for his radio broadcasts and other speeches.

Arrangement

Arranged in four series and one addition: I. Organizations, 1922-1946. II. Select Correspondence, 1925-1942. III. General Correspondence, 1923-1942. IV. Topical Files, 1920-1946.
