CALL NUMBER: MS 562

CREATOR: Woolsey family

TITLE: Woolsey family papers

DATES: 1750-1969

BULK DATES: 1811-1921

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 52 linear feet (107 boxes)

LANGUAGE: English

SUMMARY: The papers document three generations of the Woolsey family. The most prominent figures in the collection are William Walton Woolsey (1766-1839), land owner and merchant in New York City; his son, Theodore Dwight Woolsey (1801-1889), Greek scholar, political theorist and president of Yale College; and Theodore Salisbury Woolsey (1852-1929), professor of international law at Yale Law School, son of Theodore Dwight Woolsey. The papers of William Walton Woolsey contain extensive business correspondence, ledgers, legal papers, documents relating to land sales in New York and Ohio, as well as family and personal letters. Since he was engaged in the importation of sugar, cotton and hardware, some of his business correspondence is political with discussions of the Jay Treaty of 1794, the problems of piracy, American neutrality in the 1790s and the general politics of the period. Important correspondents are Chauncey Goodrich, Archibald Gracie, Eli Whitney, Noah Webster, Elihu and Nathaniel Chauncey, Oliver Wolcott, Benjamin Tallmadge, Jedidiah Morse, James Roosevelt, John A. Schuyler, Comfort Sands, John Broome, and Nicholas Bayard. The papers of Theodore Dwight Woolsey contain his writings on Greek language and literature, the Bible, international law and the texts of his sermons.

Biographical / Historical

William Walton Woolsey was born in 1766, the son of Benjamin Woolsey, a prominent New York merchant, and Anne (Muirison) Woolsey. He, like his brother George Muirison Woolsey, became a merchant in New York City engaged in foreign and domestic trade and sugar refining. In addition, he was an important landholder both in New York and in the Ohio Territory.

In 1792 Woolsey entered into a partnership with his brother-in-law, Moses Rogers, a hardware merchant. Rogers was also engaged in sugar refining, a business Woolsey later developed into a considerable fortune. They were in fact among the very first to refine sugar on a large scale in America. In addition, Woolsey became in 1807 the second president of the Eagle Fire Insurance Company, one of the oldest companies in the city of New York. He was also named as one of the directors of the Merchants' Bank and helped to obtain for it a charter which saved the bank from an "Act to restrain unincorporated Banking Associations" that had been passed in the previous state legislature. It appears that Woolsey, a brother-in-law of Timothy Dwight, was also a secret partner in the firm of Dwight, Palmer and Company.

When Woolsey and Rogers dissolved their partnership in 1804, the latter apparently paid Woolsey a "very handson sum" not to engage in the iron and hardware trade in New York for ten years. Woolsey therefore moved to New Haven in order to continue his hardware business. He remained in New Haven, where he was also president of the Eagle Bank, until 1815, when he returned to New York and resumed his old business activities.

Woolsey was closely associated in business with his brother, George Muirison Woolsey (1772-1851), a merchant whose ships successfully evaded the blockade during the embargo and carried cotton abroad. He was, of course, under heavy bond to the government for each ship that left to go to another domestic port, but, apparently through an understanding with the Collector of the Port of Perth Amboy, he was able to send his ships to sea. He was compelled, however, to go to Europe in order to save his property from confiscation and himself from prosecution for violation of the embargo. For several years he resided in Liverpool "until the Custom house at Perth Amboy was burned and the bonds with it." It is not clear whether William Walton Woolsey was a partner to these events, there are, however, a number of letters to him from his brother while the latter was exiled abroad.

Woolsey was prominent in the social and political life of New York. He was a member of the politically powerful Chamber of Commerce of New York City, an organization important to the economic development of the city. In 1796 he was elected secretary, a position he held for many years, and from 1825 until his death in 1839, he served as vice-president. He also served for many years as president of the Merchants' Exchange Company. In 1817 he was appointed by the Supreme Court of New York as one of the appraisers of the property which became the Erie Canal and in fact he had hosted many of the early meetings organized to further the canal project. In addition, Woolsey was vice-president of the Manufacturing Society of New York, a member of the Board of Governors of the New York Hospital, treasurer of the American Bible Society, and a very active member in the Manumission Society. He was too a member of the Friendly Club, which flourished in New York for many years before and a few years after the death of Washington, until it was disrupted by political differences. The club, which included among its members Chancellor Kent, Gilbert Aspinwall, Charles Brockden Brown, Anthony Bleeker, and the historian, playwright, and painter, William Dunlap (Woolsey's brother-in-law), met every Tuesday evening in the home of one of the members for literary discussion.

Woolsey married twice, first to Elizabeth Dwight, sister of President Dwight of Yale College and the granddaughter of Jonathan Edwards, and, after her death in 1813, to Sarah Chauncey. He died in New Haven in 1839.

THEODORE DWIGHT WOOLSEY

Theodore Dwight Woolsey, born in New York on October 31, 1801, was the son of William Walton Woolsey, a prosperous hardware merchant, and Elizabeth Dwight Woolsey. He was a nephew of Timothy Dwight and a grand-son of Jonathan Edwards. He moved with his family to New Haven in 1806, where he attended Hopkins Grammar School and graduated from Yale College in 1820, valedictorian of his class. After studying law with Charles Chauncey in Philadelphia, he studied at the Princeton Theological Seminary until 1823. He returned to Yale as a tutor in 1823 where he also completed his theological studies. He went to Europe in 1826 for four years where he traveled and studied Greek language and literature.

In 1831 he was appointed Professor of Greek language and literature at Yale College. In 1833, he married Elizabeth Martha Salisbury, by whom he had nine children. He devoted himself to the classics until 1846 when he was appointed to the presidency of Yale College. He declined it at first, doubtful of his religious fitness. Finally persuaded to accept, he was inducted into the presidency and ordained as a minister on October 21, 1846. At the start of his administration, he relinquished the teaching of Greek and began to teach History, Political Science and International Law. During the twenty-five years of his presidency Yale made greater progress than during any other previous administration.

Elizabeth Martha Salisbury died in 1852. Woolsey was remarried in 1854 to Sarah Sears Prichard, by whom he had four children. He retired from the presidency in 1871 at the age of seventy. After his resignation, he continued to instruct at Yale and was a member of the corporation until 1885. He died in 1889 at the age of eighty-eight.

Theodore Dwight Woolsey was the author of the following college text books: The Alcestis of Euripides, The Prometheus of Aeschylus, The Antigone of Aeschylus, and The Gorgias of Plato. He was also the author of three legal works: Introduction to the Study of International Law, Essays on Divorce, and Divorce and Divorce Legislation. He is also the author of A Volume of Sermons.

THEODORE SALISBURY WOOLSEY

Theodore Salisbury Woolsey was born in New Haven, Connecticut, on October 22, 1852, the son of Theodore Dwight Woolsey, then president of Yale College, and Elizabeth Martha (Salisbury) Woolsey. He entered Yale College at the age of fifteen. Upon graduation in 1872, he immediately entered the Yale Law School, where he remained, with the exception of a tour of Europe (1873-1875), until he received the degree of LL.B. in 1876.

In 1877 he was appointed instructor in public law in Yale College, and in 1878, he was appointed professor of international law in the Yale Law School, a position he occupied, with the exception of four years (1886-1890) of residence in California in order to improve his wife's health, until 1911.

Woolsey made his most notable contribution in the field of international law. In addition to the publication of J.N. Pomeroy's Lectures on International Law in Time of Peace (1886) and an enlarged edition of his father's Introduction to the Study of International Law (1891), Woolsey published many articles on specific international problems in professional journals, seventeen of which were published in 1898 under the title, America's Foreign Policy. Most of his time, however, was devoted to giving addresses and writing articles for popular journals in the attempt to persuade the American public of the significance of international law.

Woolsey was married on December 22, 1877, to Annie Gardiner Salisbury of Boston, by whom he had two sons. He died in New Haven on April 24, 1929.

Scope and Contents

The Woolsey Family Papers span three generations (1760's to the first quarter of the 20th century), centered mainly around William Walton Woolsey (1766-1839), a prosperous land owner and merchant in New York City; his son, Theodore Dwight Woolsey (1801-1889), Greek scholar, political theorist, and president of Yale College; and Theodore Salisbury Woolsey (1852-1929), son of Theodore Dwight, who gained renown as professor of International Law at Yale Law School.

The Papers are important to the historian interested in the early development of political theory and international law in the United States, the history of higher education, and especially the history of Yale College during a most eventful period in its history (1846-1871). There are also materials pertinent to the ethical and religious attitudes of the day and their relation to higher education. There are important documents and correspondence pertaining to the Chamber of Commerce of New York City, the Manumission Society, and extensive business correspondence during the period 1787 to 1839. In addition to the materials relating specifically to the Woolsey family, there are a number of letters pertaining to some of the most prominent New England families Chauncey, Salisbury, Johnson, Winthrop, Hillhouse with whom the Woolsey's were related by marriage.

The Papers are arranged into nine series: CORRESPONDENCE, WRITINGS OF THEODORE DWIGHT WOOLSEY, WRITINGS OF THEODORE SALISBURY WOOLSEY, PRINTED MATERIALS & PHOTOGRAPHS, GENEALOGICAL RECORDS, FAMILY BUSINESS DOCUMENTS, WILLIAM WALTON WOOLSEY ESTATE and BUSINESS PAPERS, and THEODORE DWIGHT WOOLSEY-OTHER PAPERS.

The CORRESPONDENCE series consists of 32 boxes of approximately 15,000 letters, the greatest part of which, is that of Theodore Dwight Woolsey. For the most part, the correspondence is intra- and inter-familial, although there are a number of letters from prominent political, educational, and religious leaders of the nineteenth century. (See the Selected List of Correspondents in the appendix). The series is especially helpful in depicting Theodore Dwight Woolsey's tenure as president of Yale College from 1846 to 1871. In addition, there are interesting letters by faculty members, such as Benjamin Silliman and Noah Porter, as well as Theodore Dwight Woolsey's own observations about religion and comparative education written while he studied and travelled in Europe.

The 27 boxes which comprise the WILLIAM WALTON WOOLSEY BUSINESS PAPERS are of particular interest. In addition to the papers relating to the Chamber of Commerce of New York City and the Manumission Society, there is an extensive correspondence pertaining to the day-to-day activities of a merchant engaged in the importation of sugar, cotton, and hardware. Much of this correspondence is between Woolsey and his agents in New Orleans, various ports in the West Indies, Montreal, Liverpool, London, and on the continent. Some of this correspondence is political in nature and reveals the concern of businessmen with various aspects of local, state, and national legislation. Specifically, there are letters containing discussions of the Jay Treaty, the problem of piracy, American neutrality in the 1790's and again during the Jefferson and Madison administrations, various acts of incorporation, i.e., Merchants Bank of New York City and the Eagle Bank of New Haven, and the policies of the British and French governments as well as those of the United States which finally culminated in the War of 1812. There is also material in this series and in the series entitled, WILLIAM WALTON WOOLSEY ESTATE, pertaining to Woolsey's land holdings in New York and the Ohio Territory. Among the notable correspondents in this series are: Chauncy Goodrich, Archibald Gracie, Eli Whitney, Noah Webster, Elihu and Nathaniel Chauncey, Theodore and Timothy Dwight, Oliver Wolcott, Benjamin Tallmadge, Jeddiah Morse, James Roosevelt, John A. Schuyler, Comfort Sands, John Broome, and Nicholas Bayard.

Series II: Theodore Dwight Woolsey Writings, 1811-1889*5.5 linear feet (14 boxes)*

The Theodore Dwight Woolsey Writings consist of both manuscript and printed articles, essays, lectures, sermons, translations, and notes. In addition, there are newspaper clippings, reports, and a few essays and articles written by others which were of interest to Woolsey.

The series is divided by subject matter into a number of sub-sections which are as follows: The series is divided by subject matter into a number of sub-sections which are as follows:

1. General: miscellaneous articles, lectures, and notes on a variety of topics, many of them written while a student at Yale College
2. Biographical: biographical essays written by Woolsey
3. Divorce: notes, articles, lectures, sermons, and newsclippings on the subject of divorce in the United States.
4. Greek Grammar: manuscript notes and an article on Greek grammar.
5. Greek Literature: essays, notes, and lectures on Greek literature.
6. Greek notebooks: bound notebooks pertaining to various topics on Greek grammar and literature; the note-books also contain some of Woolsey's financial accounts.
7. Paganism and Polytheism: manuscript articles and essays, and a complete lecture series, including printed programs, on paganism and polytheism, incorporating Woolsey's research into the mythology of the ancient Near East as well as Greek and Biblical material.
8. Biblical: Biblical writings, listed by order of the Old and New Testament books, contains exegesis, commentary, and syntactical analysis. In addition, there are critical notes and essays, notably those written for the Sunday School Times, covering the complete books of Mark and Acts.
9. Theological: essays, lectures, notes, and prayers on a variety of theological topics, such as the authority of Scriptures, the relations of Church and state, and problems in moral philosophy.
10. Bible Revision: Woolsey's annotated, printed copies of the translations of the Bible, which were circulated among the members of the Bible Revision Committee. The series also includes the printed correspondence and resolutions of both the American and British divisions of the Committee.
11. Sermons: Woolsey's sermons are arranged by order of Old and New Testament books, from which the text of the sermon is taken. Each listing notes the text and date of the sermon.
12. History: this section is listed alphabetically either by title or subject, and includes materials pertaining to European, Greek, and Reformation history. In addition, there is a general section containing Woolsey's reflections and lectures on the major themes in history and civilization.
13. International Law: contains Woolsey's writings on International Law, including papers on international disputes, arbitration, naval problems, war, and neutrality. The lectures and articles on treaties have been arranged alphabetically by the location of the treaty convention. Additional material, under the rubric of Rights and State, contains Woolsey's writings on the respective rights and duties of the citizens and of the state, and various aspects of political philosophy.

Series III: Theodore Salisbury Woolsey Writings, 1833-1922

1.5 linear feet (4 boxes)

The WRITINGS OF THEODORE SALISBURY WOOLSEY are divided into two sub-sections: "General" and "International Law," and are arranged alphabetically by subject or title. The "General" section contains a variety of Theodore Salisbury Woolsey's writings, including travel stories, essays on early American furniture and silver, American painters, biographical essays (including one on Theodore Dwight Woolsey), as well as speeches and material pertaining to Yale.

The second section, "International Law," contains writings on international disputes, border controversies, interoceanic canals, Cuba, peace conventions, the Monroe Doctrine, the Spanish-American War, a series of lectures on U.S. Diplomatic History, Yale course material, and book re-views. In addition, there is a series of articles written for Leslie's Weekly during the period of U.S. involvement in World War I and the Treaty of Versailles.

Series IV: Printed Materials, Miscellaneous Writings, and Photographs, 1754-1936*1.25 linear feet (3 boxes)*

This series consists of articles, addresses, photos, and reports by or about various members of the Woolsey family. Much of the material, e.g., biographical sketches, academic documents, description of election and ordination, obituaries and eulogies, pertains to Theodore Dwight Woolsey. There are also reports and historical accounts of Yale. In addition, there is a section containing photographs of Theodore Dwight Woolsey and William Dunlap, their uncle, an early American painter, in whom both Theodore Dwight and Theodore Salisbury Woolsey took an interest, and Edward E. Salisbury.

It should be noted that the materials in folders 42, 46, 48, and 50, while belonging with this series, are not printed matter. The series is arranged alphabetically by subject or title.

Accession 2015-M-032: Additional material, 1808-1868

These materials came to Yale after being separated from the Johnson Family Papers retained by the Stratford Historical Society. The bulk of this accession documents the estates of the Woolsey family and their individual and joint business and realty endeavors.

While the Woolsey and Johnson families were connected in a multitude of ways, a major connecting thread in this accession is William Samuel Johnson, Yale Hon. MA 1819, husband to Laura Woolsey, who was a lawyer and co-executor of William Walton Woolsey's estate with Theodore Dwight Woolsey and John M. Woolsey. A substantial portion of this accession documents William Samuel Johnson's legal career, including a manuscript establishing William Samuel Johnson's law partnership with Seth Staples, founder of the Yale Law School.

Researchers will also find several dozen letters to John Mumford Woolsey from his sister, Sarah Dwight (Woolsey) Johnson, wife of Charles Frederick Johnson (a cousin of William Samuel Johnson), regarding family and financial matters, including her personal estate, of which John was a trustee. One letter discusses career plans for her son, William Woolsey Johnson, Yale 1862, who became a distinguished mathematician (1868 May 8). Sarah's investing acumen is evident in a telegram sent in June 1868 at the height of the great transcontinental railroad race, reading "Buy Central Pacific if possible."
