Atlee family Charlotte Hazen Atlee White Rowe Charlotte Hazen Atlee White Rowe (1782-1863) was born in Lancaster, PA. Orphaned at age eleven, she went to live in Rutland, MA where she later met and married merchant Nathaniel White. After the death of White and her son with him, Charlotte moved to Haverhill, MA and joined the Baptist Church there. Also living in this area were Ann Hasseltine who married Adoniram Judson and Harriet Atwood who married Samuel Newell, early Congregational missionaries. Charlotte later moved to Philadelphia where she joined the Samsom Street Baptist Church. At this time the Baptist were forming a national organization for international missions. Adoniram Judson, who had initially gone to the mission field as a Congregationalist was appointed as the first Baptist missionary but his wife Ann was considered a volunteer assistant missionary. In 1814 Charlotte helped form and lead the Sansom Street Baptist Female Society for Promoting Evangelical Missions. In 1815 the Baptist mission board appointed George Hough and Charlotte White to join the Judson mission work in Burma, causing a controversy because Charlotte was a woman and not an ordained man. While at a stopover in Calcutta, Charlotte met and married Joshua Rowe, a British Baptist misisonary who was a widower with three young sons. Instead of proceeding to Burma, Charlotte served with Joshua in India under the auspices of the British Baptist Missionary Society. She learned Hindi and advocated for education for girls and women. Charlotte and Joshua had three children together, twin daughters and a son. When Joshua died, Charlotte was left as a single parent of six children. She self-funded her continuing missionary work overseeing several schools and worship sites for eleven years but eventually financial pressures forced her to return to Britain to seek official appointment by the British Baptists. After three years in England, Charlotte and her children returned to the U.S. Gift of Joseph Woolston

	Clarke, Walter and Samuel Walter Clarke (1812-1871) was born in Middletown, Connecticut, the son of Warner and Abigail Clarke. He graduated from Yale College in 1837. Following a few years teaching at the Waterbury Academy and the College of Mobile (Alabama), he began his studies at the Yale Divinity School, graduating in 1840. Clarke was ordained as pastor of the First Congregational Church in Canterbury, Connecticut in 1842 and then served the South Church in Hartford from 1845 to 1859. It was during this time in Hartford that Clarke was involved in the theological controversy that pitted conservative church leaders against acclaimed minister of Hartford's North Church, Horace Bushnell. Clarke was a member of the five-person committee that was appointed in June 1849 to study Bushnell's works. The committee presented three reports after a 3-2 vote in favor of Bushnell's exoneration. The first report addressed procedural matters and was approved unanimously. The majority report, representing the three Bushnell supporters, demonstrated that the Hartford minister ought to be exonerated of all charges of heresy. The detailed minority report was presented by Clarke and Joel Hawes. Clarke served the Mercer Street Presbyterian Church in New York City from 1859 to 1861 and then was pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in Buffalo, NY for the last ten years of his life. Walter Clarke married Mary A. Clark in 1839. Following her death in 1849 he married Elizabeth Grew. Samuel Taylor Clarke was born in 1843, the son of Walter and Mary Clarke. He graduated from Hamilton College in 1862 and studied theology at Union Theological Seminary in New York City. Samuel became pastor of a church in Detroit, Michigan and later of Presbyterian churches in Oswego and Elmira, New York. He married Fanny Stephens in 1868 and they had a daughter, Edith, in 1871. Papers of Walter Clarke and his son Samuel T. Clarke provide an interesting glimpse into clergy life in the second half of the 19th century. Notable in this collection are letters exchanged between Walter Clarke and Horace Bushnell, who was minister at Hartford's North Church while Clarke was minister at Hartford's South Church. Clarke was among the conservative churchmen who unsuccessfully sought to expel Bushnell as a heretic. Bushnell's church unanimously withdrew from the local consociation in 1852, thus removing any possibility of further action against him. Clarke's letters to and from Bushnell from the years 1854-1858 refer to Clarke's role on the committee that prepared reports for the ruling on Bushnell's status. The collection also contains correspondence and documents of Walter Clarke's son Samuel T. Clarke, who was also a minister. A very complete collection of

Crump, John

John Crump was born in New London, Connecticut in 1814. Following his graduation from Yale College he studied Medicine and went to the South due to ill health but he returned to New London and died of pulmonary consumption on July 4, 1835.

John Crump is likely to be the author of the journal filed here but the item does not include his name.

b. 484, f. 1	Manuscript journal kept by a Yale College student Crump began his spiritual autobiography at the suggestion of Prof. Nathaniel William Taylor, Dwight Professor of Didactic Theology at Yale and chief architect of the revisionist "New Haven School" of theology. Throughout, Crump mentions Taylor and other professors and administrators in the College, who are encouraging a general revival of religion going on in the town and among the students. He also refers to a number of fellow students, alums, and friends, all of whom are caught up in the prayer meetings, public worship services, private gatherings in the dormitory, and personal conversations around the questions of devotion, conversion, and duty. Over all, the diary gives us a brief but valuable glimpse into a time of intense religious fervor, dubbed by scholars as the Second Great Awakening, not only in New Haven but throughout Connecticut. This note and a typed transcript of the journal have been provided by its donor, Kenneth Minkema, Executive Editor of The Works of Jonathan Edwards and Director of the Jonathan Edwards Center at YDS. Gift of Kenneth Minkema in honor of Yale Divinity School's bicentennial in 2022.	1831 March 6 - June 18

Day, George Edward

George Edward Day was born in 1815, son of Gad Day and Roxanna Rice Day. He graduated from Yale College in 1833 and then taught two years in the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb in New York City. He graduated from Yale Divinity School in 1838 and was Instructor in Sacred Literature in the Yale Divinity School for two years before entering the ministry, serving churches in Marlboro and Northampton, MA. Following ten years in the ministry Day served for 15 years as Professor of Biblical Literature in the Lane Theological Seminary at Cincinnati, OH. In 1866 he returned to YDS as Professor of the Hebrew Language and Literature and Biblical Theology. In 1888 he became Dean of the Divinity School, and for three or four years thereafter shared the duties of his professorship with Professor William Rainey Harper. Upon Day's retirement from the Office of Dean in 1895, he was made Professor Emeritus. Day and his wife Olivia Hotchkiss Day were the benefactors of the Day Missions Library at YDS, established in 1891. Day died in 1905.

Hovey, Gail

Hovey was among the founders of the "Zambia Group," a small community of persons with a common history in the National Student Christian Federation/ University Christian Movement who first met in Zambia in 1967. Most of the participants were involved in the Frontier Internship in Mission program and other programs initiated by Margaret Flory. The "Zambia Group" remained a community for some thirty years, centered on with a focus on concern for southern Africa. At annual meetings they focused on strategies for change in southern Africa and their relationships to those strategies. They sought one another's counsel about vocational, relational and resource decisions, pooling money to support activities both in the U.S. and in Africa for the liberation of southern Africa.

b. 37, f. 1-10	Zambia Group files The Zambia Group files include minutes of annual meetings and financial records, including letters of acknowledgement from organizations supported by the group, such as the American Committee on Africa and SWAPO. Lay, Corliss and Lillian Corliss Wilkes Lay (1862-) and Lillian Matthews Lay were missionaries serving under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Maratha Mission, in India from 1890 to 1893, stationed primarily in Ahmednagar and Mumbai [Bombay]. After their return to the U.S. in 1893 the Lays worked at Yankton College in South Dakota. Corliss Lay was a student at Yale Divinity School 1888-1889 and graduated from Chicago Theological Seminary in 1890.

A detailed summary of the collection is available in the first folder. Letters in the collection describe the Lays' work teaching Indian girls and boys and being in charge of a church that had up to 800 students in its congregation. Their candid, often negative, impressions of India may be of interest to researchers in ethnographic studies. Topics in the letters include persistent sickness at the mission school, the status of women in India, run-ins with English soldiers and companies, child marriage, agriculture, missionary politics, and so forth.

Martin, Ebenezer

Ebenezer Martin (1732-1795) was born in Windham County, Connecticut. Martin graduated from Yale College in 1756 and went on to pursue a career in ministry. During his studies at Yale, Martin met and married his wife Susanna (Plumb) Martin, and together they had seven children. One of these children, Joseph Plumb Martin who was raised by his maternal grandparents, famously wrote and published a narrative describing his experience as a soldier for the Continental Army in the Revolutionary War. The Reverend Ebenezer Martin's began his ministerial career as the founding preacher of the First Congregational Church in Becket, Massachusetts in 1759, where he remained until his dismissal in 1764. Throughout his life, Rev. Martin struggled to maintain steady employment, and was dismissed from his position as minister on multiple occasions due to his tendency to accumulate debt and fall into disagreements with members of the congregations he served. He moved around frequently, living in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and New York throughout his adult life, before he died in 1795.

b. 490, f. 3	Journal This journal, belonging to Ebenezer Martin, contains entries written by Martin on a daily basis from January to December in 1794. Monrad, Anna

Anna Marie Monrad was born in Karere, New Zealand. She graduated from Rockford College in 1906 and attended university in Denmark for a year in 1914. She began work as a cataloger in the Yale Library system in 1906 and was responsible for classifying the Day Missions Library of Yale Divinity School.

The material within Monrad's collection relates to her relief work in the immediate aftermath of World War II. Working with Yale Divinity students, various churches in New Haven (Dixwell Congregational Church and St. John's Episcopal Church), and the Society of Friends, Monrad facilitated the sending of clothing and food packages to contacts in Europe. She officially served on the New Haven Committee for CARE (Cooperative for American Remittances in Europe), which formed in 1945 to provide surplus American military rations to Europeans. CARE worked through established networks of humanitarian organizations, including the American Friends Service Committee. Anna Monrad, however, worked to efficiently transport aid to her contacts in Europe regardless of the organization—using the Caritas SAFE (Save a Friend in Europe) packages, the Meals for Millions program, and sending personal items to respond to the specific expressed needs of her contacts. In a fundraising letter which Monrad retained, Timothy P. Haworth called the members of the New Haven F.O.R. and the Society of Friends to action, writing, “the pipelines of the UNRRA should be filled to overflowing, the smaller pipelines of private agencies should be stuffed, and those tiny personal pipelines of individual to individual should be filled to the brim.”

The documentation in this collection relates to Anna Monrad’s post-World War II relief work. It mostly dates from 1946-1949 and is written in English, Italian, French, Finnish, and German. Monrad’s contacts requested goods, expressed their gratitude, and narrated their own experiences of war and the immediate postwar period. The collected correspondence provides insight into subjective experiences of violence, hunger, internment, migration, and the rapidly changing political landscape of postwar Europe and a divided Germany.

About the collection

A detailed description of the contents of the collection, including names of individuals involved, is contained in the first folder. Letters from a number of individuals involved in the relief efforts are included in the collection.

b. 480, f. 1	Biographical and organizational documentation Includes domestic fundraising and organizational correspondence including with Ruth Bainton, receipts of deliveries abroad; a listing of materials typically included in a relief package, and a newspaper clipping related to the New Haven Committee for CARE.	1941–1949

Stuntz Allen Family

The daughter of Methodist missionaries Clyde Bronson Stuntz and Florence (Sally) Watters Stuntz, Elizabeth (Betty) Stuntz Allen grew up primarily in Lahore, at that time part of India but now Pakistan. Betty graduated from the Woodstock School in Mussoorie, India in 1942 and attended Smith College in Northampton, Massachusetts, graduating in 1947. She received a degree in Social Administration from Western Reserve University in Cleveland in 1949. While preparing at Hartford Seminary to go to India as a missionary herself—marking the third generation of missionaries to India in her family—Betty met Daniel Dorchester Allen, the son of a Methodist pastor. Before accepting his own call to India, Dan graduated in 1946 Yale College and 1949 from Yale Divinity School. After moving to India, Dan and Betty married in the presence of her parents in Lahore in 1950. From 1949 to 1969 they worked for the Methodist Board of Foreign Missions in various capacities throughout India in development and educational work: in Delhi, Punjab, and Woodstock. After eleven moves in twenty years and the births of their four children, Dan and Betty settled in Connecticut where Dan continued to minister in local congregations in New England and Betty with United Methodist Women for the next twenty years.

The Stuntz-Allen Family Papers contain materials from multiple generations, underscoring the abundance of missionaries within the extended Stuntz family. The gathered correspondence contains a letter from Betty's grandfather, Homer C. Stuntz, as well as substantial correspondence from Clyde Bronson and Florence Watters Stuntz addressed to Betty during her time at Smith College. In the letters, dating from 1945 until 1949, the Stuntzes describe their experiences and advocacy during the Partition of India (1947-1948). On her mother's side, materials from Betty's 1989 trip to China to celebrate the centennial of Ijishan (Wuhu General) Hospital, relate to her late aunt, medical missionary Hyla S. Watters (RG 327). Further materials, such as the reunion binder from the Woodstock School class of 1942, provide insight into the varied lives of missionary children in the latter half of the twentieth century.

b. 463, f. 10	Toronto Mission Studies Group On behalf of Edinburgh 2010, Taylor met with a network in Toronto that had an interest in mission and power in the midst of a Canadian process of truth and reconciliation with First Nations. This visit was very fruitful and, in combination with Taylor's Overseas Mission Study Center connections in New Haven (where she served on the board for several years), these contacts became the nucleus of the Edinburgh 2010 Mission and Power study track. Folder includes participants list, notes, minutes, and email correspondence with Gail Allan, Maylann Maybee, and others.	2008-2009
b. 463, f. 11	Research on successor agencies, and notes on representation and distribution of attendees In anticipation of inviting North American agencies to send people and dollars for Edinburgh 2010, Taylor did a great deal of research on the successor agencies of those who were present in 1910. This file contains the results of that research as well as some of the process notes. The issue of an appeal was caught up in the question of how many people could be accommodated and also how to avoid having North Atlantic people over-represented at the vent. This file also includes many of the meeting notes on representation size and distribution, as Taylor was drawn deeply into that process by staffing a working group on it. Folder contains early chars and correspondence about conference participants, emails.	2008-2009

Wyland, Benjamin Franklin

Benjamin F. Wyland, son of Frank and Molly Griffith Wyland, was born on March 16, 1882, in Harlan, Shelby County, Iowa. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Iowa in 1905 and his B.D. from Yale in 1908. Wyland married Ada Beach on January 14, 1909, in New Haven, Connecticut. They had four children together. After being ordained as a minister in the Congregational Church in 1908, Rev. Wyland served as associate pastor at the Tompkins Avenue Church, 1910-1917. During 1917-1918 he was religious editor of the New York Tribune. In 1918, Wyland served in the pulpit of Union Church in Worcester, Massachusetts. In 1923 he was an exchange preacher between the U.S. and England. He held this position again in 1933. From 1926 to 1936, Rev. Wyland was pastor at the First Plymouth Congregational Church of Lincoln, Nebraska. During his tenure, a new church building was completed. After leaving Lincoln in 1936, Wyland served three years as a pastor in Brooklyn, New York. During World War II he became liaison Chaplain for the Council of Churches of Maryland. After the war, Wyland moved to St. Petersburg, Florida, where he continued to serve his church and where he was also deeply involved in numerous civil rights and social welfare projects. Ada Wyland died in 1953 and Benjamin then married Mildred (Carmichael) Oeschger. Mildred died in 1978. Rev. Benjamin F. Wyland died in St. Petersburg, Florida, on July 24, 1986. He is buried in the Harlan Cemetery at Harlan, Iowa, along with his second wife, Mildred.
