The Living Theatre

The Living Theatre was founded in 1947 by Julian Beck and Judith Malina in New York City. The company performed politically charged plays commenting on war, Wall Street, and income inequality even being arrested during some of their public performances. The group produced experimental and little-known plays by writers including Gertrude Stein, William Carlos Williams, and John Ashbery. In 1961, the company toured Europe with one of its biggest successes, "The Connection" and other plays including Paradise Now and The Legacy of Cain. The Living Theatre left New York in 1964 after failing to pay $23,000 in back taxes. Malina and Beck represented themselves in the trial. The theatre company focused on avant garde productions including The Connection and The Brig. Theatre productions often broke the fourth wall and included audience participation. Theatre company members were also arrested for various acts of civil disobedience. The theatre company performed all over the world in public and unique spaces. The theatre returned to New York City in the 1980s. After Julian Beck's death in 1985, Hanon Reznikov was named codirector. Reznikov died in 2008 and Malina in 2015. The Living Theatre continues with artistic director Brad Burgess to conduct workshops and perform in the United States and abroad.

Judith Malina papers
55 linear feet (44 boxes)

1940–2014

Judith Malina was born in Kiel, Germany on June 4, 1926. In 1929, her family emigrated to New York City. She met her future husband and collaborator, Julian Beck in 1943. In 1945, Malina made her acting debut, studying at the New School for Social Research, studying with Erwin Piscator. She married Julian Beck in 1948. Their son, Garrick Beck, was born in 1949. Her daughter Isha was born in 1967. Together in 1947, they founded The Living Theatre, an alternative theater company which was based in New York City. She created, directed, and acted in the company's plays including Antigone, Frankenstein, and Paradise Now. She also taught at New York University and Columbia University. Malina appeared in film and television, including The Sopranos, The Addams Family, and Dog Day Afternoon. Along with articles and monographs, she published her early diaries and a memoir of her theatre training under Erwin Piscator, The Piscator Notebook and a book of poetry, Poems of a Wandering Jewess. In 1988, Malina married Hanon Reznikov, a writer, director, actor in the Living Theatre, who became codirector of the company after Julian Beck's death. Reznikov died in 2008. Malina died on April 10, 2015.

Judith Malina was a prolific diarist and kept an almost daily diary for over 70 years, documenting both her personal and professional lives in great detail. Malina wrote about daily events in her diaries and excluded almost no details. She comments on her physical and mental state, her sexual activities, and her family history. She writes about conversations, feelings, relationships, and events both in her personal life and in the wider world. Malina also wrote about her family, including her parents, her life with Julian Beck, her husband from 1947 until his death in 1985 and co-creator of The Living Theatre, her children, as well as her life with Hanon Reznikov, co-director of The Living Theatre who she married in 1988.

The diaries are a comprehensive look into a life full of teaching, directing, acting, research, and activism. They track the formation of The Living Theatre and its growth and performances over time. Malina's diaries portray her desire to form the theatre, the theatre's triumphs and challenges over the years, and its transition into the 21st century. They include details about productions, performances, rehearsing, and writing. The diaries also offer a glimpse into the lives of the artists, actors, writers, and directors that were colleagues, friends, collaborators, and students of Malina's.

Judith Malina's diaries are mostly handwritten in notebooks of various sizes, and some include small photographs, ephemera, and portions of correspondence or conversations written in Malina's hand. Most of the diaries were identified as being written in New York City, but other locations where Malina traveled to, lived in, and worked in include Brazil, France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and Greece. Grove Press published her diaries in one volume entitled The Diaries of Judith Malina, 1947-1957 in 1984. In addition to the diaries, the subseries includes appointment calendars and notebooks in which Malina kept her notes about different productions and research topics.

In the subseries inventory, diaries are titled according to the location at which they were written. Diaries for which a location was not specified are titled, "Diary with unspecified location."

The subseries is arranged into three groupings: I. Diaries, II. Appointment Calendars, III. Notebooks. Materials are arranged chronologically within each grouping.

1945-1985

Julian Beck was born on May 31, 1925, in Washington Heights, Manhattan. He attended Yale University and dropped out to pursue art and writing. He established The Living Theatre with his wife, Judith Malina, in 1947. Beck also acted outside of the theatre, appearing in films including The Poltergeist II and Cotton Club and an episode of Miami Vice. He published two non-fiction books, The Life of the Theatre and Theandric, along with several volumes of poetry. Beck was diagnosed with stomach cancer in 1983 and died on September 14, 1985.

The subseries documents the life and work of Julian Beck, particularly his creative process, writings, and acting career. Beck's journals and notebooks provide a detailed account of his daily life and work. The subseries also contains drafts, notes, research files, and correspondence relating to Beck's writings, including works he wrote collaboratively with his wife Judith Malina and other members of

The Living Theatre. Also present are scripts, correspondence, and production files relating to Beck's career in theatre, film, and television; Beck's literary and personal correspondence; papers relating to his painting and art career; the contents of his desk and office at the time of his death; and personal papers, including school papers, financial records, medical records, and Beck's collection of ephemera, printed material, and clippings.

Boxes 277- 278 restricted until 2035. For further information consult the appropriate curator.

Material related to Julian Beck can also be found in the Judith Malina papers subseries and the Beck and Malina family papers subseries.

Organized into seven subseries: Journals and Notebooks, Writings, Theatre and Acting Papers, Correspondence, Painting and Art Papers, Desk and Office Files, and Personal Papers.
