Processing Information

The Czesław Miłosz Papers contain material formerly classed as Uncat MS Vault 489, Uncat MS Vault 577, Uncat MS Vault 736, Uncat MS Vault 797, Uncat MSS 114 and Uncat MS Vault Milosz.

Each of the three largest accessions that comprise the Czesław Miłosz Papers was prepared for sale by Miłosz and his assistants. This organization and identification has been retained where appropriate and the three accessions have been interfiled. Several smaller accessions (including a 1966 donation from Miłosz and donations from Farrar, Straus & Giroux) were interfiled.

Students who assisted in the processing of this collection include Rebecca Henriksen, Zakhar Ishov, Claire Morelon and Ewelina Rudnicka. Visiting archivist Henryk Citko identified and described a portion of the papers.

While the primary language of the finding aid is English, much of the descriptive language (folder titles, titles of works, personal names and place names) is in Polish. Alphabetical listings in Polish therefore follow Polish conventions (e.g. ł follows l and ę follows e). Since many of the Polish names cited in the finding aid are of émigrés or people who published widely outside of Poland, readers may find some inconsistency in the spelling of Polish names (e.g. Oscar Milosz is used throughout the finding aid rather than the Polish spelling Oskar Miłosz). Additionally, Polish names and titles that are cited in English-language works are often transliterated and therefore do not use Polish characters (e.g. A Poet's Work:

An Introduction to Czesław Miłosz). The usage followed in this finding aid reflects the material being described and therefore is not normalized.

Electronic files were refreshed into the Yale University Library Rescue Repository. Technical specifications are filed with the media in Restricted Fragile Papers.

Existence and Location of Copies

Portions of the collection are available on microfilm.

Printed material received with the collection was removed for separate cataloging and can be accessed by searching the library's online catalog.

Czesław Miłosz, 1911-2004

Czesław Miłosz, poet, essayist and Nobel Laureate, was born on June 30, 1911 in Šeteniai (Szetejnie), Lithuania and died on August 14, 2004 in Kraków, Poland, at the age of 93. He married Janina Dłuska (1909-1986) in 1944 and they had two sons: Anthony and John Peter. His second wife Carol Thigpen, whom he married in 1992, died in 2002.

Miłosz grew up in Lithuania amid diverse languages and ethnicities (including Polish, Lithuanian, Russian and Jewish) yet retained a strong attachment to his native country and language throughout his decades of life in Western Europe and the United States. As a child and young adult, Miłosz lived under an unstable series of governments and regimes, witnessing the political and social upheavals of the two world wars and rise of the Eastern Bloc. Miłosz studied law at Stefan Batory University in Vilnius (also known as Vilnius University). It was during this time that he published his first poetry in the University publication Alma Mater Vilnensis (1930), and later in a slim printed collection Poemat o czasie zastygłym (1933). He also co-founded the literary group and journal Żagary in Vilnius. While traveling to Paris in the 1930s he met a distant relative, Oscar V. de Lubicz Miłosz, who was to be an important lifelong influence.

After completing his studies Miłosz worked in radio, first for Polish Radio in Vilnius (1936-1937). His second collection of poems Trzy zimy (1936) was published during this time. When he was dismissed, apparently for political reasons (perhaps because he included Jewish authors in his literary programming), he moved to Warsaw and worked for Polish National Radio until the outbreak of the Second World War.

During the war, Miłosz produced several clandestine publications including the anthology Pieśń niepodległa (Invincible song) and the collection of his poems Wiersze (Poems, under the pseudonym Jan Syruć). His war-time poems are ironically juxtaposed to the profound trauma of the war and the Nazi occupation of Warsaw. In Świat (The World) Miłosz created defiantly serene portraits of faith, hope, love, fear and recovery that are nevertheless testament to the heaviness of war (and in stark contrast to his earlier poems written in Vilnius). This and other poetry from 1936-1945 is collected in Ocalenie (Rescue [1945]).

After the Second World War, Miłosz became a cultural attaché for the People's Republic of Poland in New York and Washington, D.C. He then accepted a post in France in 1950. Increasingly estranged from the Polish government, he defected in 1951, obtaining political asylum in France. His defection prompted criticism from leftist intellectuals (Pablo Neruda was among his outspoken critics). As Miłosz struggled with his exile and his role as a Polish-language poet in France, he published his analyses of contemporary political upheaval in numerous prose works and regular contributions to Kultura, the Polish-language literary monthly published in Paris. His first post-emigration volume of poems, Światło dzienne, was published by Institut Literacki in 1953. In Poland, his work was circulated chiefly in clandestine copies between 1951 and 1980 since his writing was censored.

Much of Miłosz's prose writing in the 1950s was semi-autobiographical. His early life in rural Lithuania inspired the characters in the novel Dolina Issy (The valley of Issa, 1955). Zniewolony umysł (The captive mind, 1953) and Zdobycie władzy (The seizure of power, 1955), which thrust him into the international spotlight, examined the moral and psychological pressures of life under a repressive totalitarian regime, providing context for his decision to defect. Rodzinna europa (Native realm, 1959) explores the difficulties of balancing his Eastern European identity and strong attachment to the Polish language with his life as an émigré.

Miłosz emigrated to the United States in 1960. He initially accepted a temporary lectureship at the University of California, Berkeley and was appointed Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures in 1961. He maintained close ties with the Polish émigré community in Paris, visiting frequently and continuing his association with Instytut Literacki. His works of literary criticism and anthologies of Polish poetry published in the 1960s (including Postwar Polish poetry [1965] and History of Polish literature [1969]) drew increasing attention to Polish literature in Europe and the United States.

In the United States, Miłosz was confronted with the fact that Polish literature was little-known in American circles, referring to himself as "Wrong Honorable Professor Milosz/Who wrote poems in some unheard-of tongue" (Magic Mountain [1975]). Any trace of self-conceived obscurity vanished in 1980 when he won the Nobel Prize for Literature. The decision to award Miłosz the prize was made just before the democratic Solidarity labor strikes in Poland became widespread (activity that led to the imposition of martial law in Poland and eventually to the democratic change of government in 1989). These events, together with the appointment of Pope John Paul II two years prior, constituted a dynamic affirmation of Polish culture in the world spotlight.

In 1981, Miłosz visited Poland for the first time since his defection thirty years earlier. He was welcomed by immense crowds who celebrated his writing and his recognition as Nobel Laureate. He met with numerous literary and political figures, including Lech Wałęsa (leader of the Solidarity movement and future President of the Republic of Poland).

Miłosz continued to travel extensively after his retirement from teaching in 1978, accepting appointments as a visiting lecturer from, among others, Harvard University and the University of Michigan. He traveled to Poland regularly and his visits were increasingly lengthy until he moved to Kraków in 2000. He continued to publish numerous volumes of poetry and prose works, including translations of his own poetry into English.

Miłosz was a prolific translator to and from Polish and his translations introduced many modern Polish poets (including Aleksander Wat and Anna Świrszczyńska) to English-language readers. He undertook the monumental task of translating portions of the Bible after studying the fifteenth-century Puławski Psalter. His English translations of Polish poetry are compiled in anthologies such as Czas niepokoju (1958) and Mowa wiązana (1986).

Miłosz received numerous prizes and honors, including the Prix Littéraire Européen (1953), the Neustadt International Prize for Literature (1978), the Nobel Prize for Literature (1980), and a National Medal of Arts (1990). Additional information on Czesław Miłosz is available in standard print and online biographical resources.

Scope and Contents

The Czesław Miłosz Papers document the life and work of the poet, essayist and Nobel Laureate Czesław Miłosz. The papers consist of writings, correspondence, photographs, personal papers, audio material, and printed material (including newspaper clippings, printed ephemera and clandestine samizdat publications), spanning the years 1880-2000, with the bulk of the material dating from 1940 to 1989. While some writings, photographs and personal documents pre-date the Second World War, the earliest correspondence dates from 1946.

The papers document all aspects of Miłosz's professional life and include original holograph and typescript drafts of his major works of poetry and prose from 1945 to 1992, drafts or transcripts of hundreds of essays, speeches and lectures, transcripts of radio broadcasts, teaching material, and documentation of his collaboration with Aleksander Wat.

The papers document the domains of Miłosz's eminent career as a poet, writer and scholar of Slavic literature, his creative writing process, the relation of literary figures to historical events and movements of the twentieth century (including the Second World War, the rise of Soviet-influenced Communist rule in Poland, and upheavals in the Polish government in the 1980s), and themes of exile and emigration, particularly as they relate to Polish émigrés in France and the United States. Correspondence and writings directly address the intellectual and political themes that are prevalent in Miłosz's work, such as the incompatibility of totalitarian government and creative expression, the nature of religious faith, and the pain of exile.

Miłosz maintained long-standing association with the Polish émigré community of Paris after he moved to the United States. He frequently corresponded with the affiliates of Institut Literacki. This relationship is also evident in his regular contributions to the monthly serial Kultura. Major correspondents in the papers include Józef Czapski, Jerzy Giedroyc, Jan Goślicki, Zbigniew Herbert, Zygmunt Hertz, Zofia Hertz, Konstanty Jeleński, Aleksander Wat and Paulina Wat.

In addition to Miłosz's writings, lectures and teaching, the papers include sporadic documentation of personal and financial matters. This documentation includes financial records, legal records (especially relating to immigration) and family photographs. Among the printed material that Miłosz collected are many clandestine (samizdat) publications that were produced in Poland despite prohibitive censorship. This collection, while fragmentary, is representative of clandestine publication activity during the 1980s.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1946-2000

32.11 linear feet (78 boxes)

Series I consists chiefly of Miłosz's incoming correspondence from writers, scholars, publishers, friends, family and fans. The earliest correspondence (filed in the separate subseries Postwar Correspondence) dates from the time period directly after the Second World War when Miłosz worked in diplomatic posts for the People's Republic of Poland in New York and in Washington, D.C. The latest correspondence is from 2000, when Miłosz moved to Kraków, where he spent the last four years of his life.

The general correspondence details Miłosz's life and professional activity from his years in France in the 1950s through the year 2000. Topics of correspondence include practical business (e.g. publication agreements and travel for appearances), political matters (e.g. the plight of suppressed writers and artists in Poland), personal reflections, and literary and philosophical inquiry.

Some files include drafts or copies of outgoing letters, as noted in folder descriptions.

Organized into three subseries: Postwar Correspondence, General Correspondence, and Special Congratulatory Letters and Telegrams.

Postwar Correspondence

The subseries Postwar Correspondence consists of interfiled letters from two categories designated by Miłosz: "Letters, family and friends up to 1950" and "Letters, writers and artists up to 1950." The library's decision to retain this subseries as a distinct group reflects a distinction that made between this early correspondence and other, later correspondence. The time period of 1946-1950 was particularly challenging as his diplomatic service to the Polish government weighed heavily upon him. The subseries documents the early development of his criticisms of Eastern European communism that were later expressed in writings such as Zdobycie władzy and Zniewolony umysł.

Some of this correspondence was printed in Zaraz po wojnie (1998).

Additional letters from many correspondents included in this subseries are filed in General Correspondence

Series II: Writings, 1934-2000*30.44 linear feet (74 boxes)*

Series II consists of drafts, proofs and other material documenting a comprehensive range of Miłosz's writings, including poetry, political analysis, literary criticism, short fiction, memoirs and novels. The papers include original holograph drafts for all of Miłosz's major works (including translations of his poetry and books into English) before the mid-1980s. Some works have multiple drafts, though most files consist of a single, corrected draft. Some drafts are accompanied by extensive notes, such as the holograph transcript of the Puławski Psalter that Miłosz used to prepare for his translation of portions of the Bible into Polish. Typescripts and computer printouts are present for Miłosz's later writings, and material is less comprehensive after the mid-1990s. Computer printouts, dating from the early 1990s on, are generally lightly corrected, in contrast to the heavily annotated earlier holograph drafts. The papers do not include documentation of posthumous publications.

The Poetry subseries includes holograph drafts of most of Miłosz's major works of poetry, including Ocalenie (1945), Światło dzienne (1953), Traktat poetycki (1957), Król Popiel i inne wiersze (1962), Gucio zaczarowany (1965), Miasto bez imienia (1969), Hymn o perle (1982). Corrected typescript or computer printout drafts are present for Nieobjęta ziemia (1984), Dalsze okolice (1991), and Piesek przydrożny (1997). Only the introduction for Kroniki is present. Miłosz's earliest collected volumes of poetry (Poemat o czasie zastygłym [1933] and Trzy zimy[1936]) are represented only as printed versions.

The Prose subseries includes material of diverse genres: fiction, memoir, history, literary analysis, political commentary, and letters to editors. Major works of prose include book-length works of fiction, memoir, history, literary analysis and political commentary. Material filed under this heading includes holograph drafts of Zniewolony umysł (1953), Zdobycie władzy (1955), Dolina Issy (1955), Rodzinna Europa (1959), Człowiek wśród skorpionów (1962), Widzenia nad Zatoką San Francisco (1969), and Prywatne obowiązki (1972). Typescript drafts are present for History of Polish literature (1969), Emperor of the earth: Modes of eccentric vision (1977), Ziema Ulro (1977), Ogród nauk (1979), and Witness of poetry/ Świadectwo poezji (1983). The heading also includes a draft of a science fiction novel unpublished during Miłosz's lifetime (Góry Parnasu). Shorter works of prose include essays on literature and contemporary politics as well as short works of fiction and some letters to editors.

The Notebooks subseries includes holograph notes on a variety of topics and drafts of prose, poetry and correspondence.

The subseries Translations by Miłosz consists of drafts and other material documenting Miłosz's translation of others' work, including modern poetry, portions of the Bible and a few prose works (such as those of Oscar V. de Lubicz Milosz).

The subseries Works Edited or Compiled by Miłosz includes drafts, notes and other material documenting poetry collections that Miłosz edited or compiled.

Series II is organized into six subseries: Poetry, Major Works of Prose, Essays and Other Shorter Works of Prose, Notebooks, Translations by Miłosz, and Works Edited or Compiled by Miłosz.

Series III: Interviews, Lectures, Broadcasts and Readings, 1946-1990*3.34 linear feet (9 boxes)*

Series III consists of transcripts, drafts and printed versions of interviews of Miłosz, lectures and speeches, radio broadcasts and notes for poetry readings. Most of the interviews were conducted orally and were re-worked into journalistic or literary publications. The lectures and speeches include Miłosz's 1980 Nobel acceptance speech, formal presentations at conferences or in academic settings and addresses to literary groups and clubs. Some lectures that were later published as essays (and material that may not have been readily identifiable as a speech or lecture) are filed in Series II, Essays and Other Shorter Works of Prose. Radio broadcasts are transcripts or notes from Miłosz's programming on the British Broadcasting Corporation.

In various languages, as indicated by the language of the folder description or folder-level notes.

Series III is organized into four subseries: Interviews of Miłosz, Lectures and Speeches, Radio Broadcasts and Material for Poetry Readings. The Interviews of Miłosz subseries is arranged alphabetically by interviewer. The remaining subseries are arranged roughly chronologically.

Series IV: Aleksander Wat Memoir and Translations, 1963-1991*2.92 linear feet (7 boxes)*

Series IV includes audio recordings, transcripts, drafts and other material related to Miłosz's work with Aleksander Wat (including posthumous publication of his works). In the 1960s Miłosz recorded Aleksander Wat's memoirs in a series of conversations. Miłosz and Wat recorded 39 sessions of conversation that correspond to chapters in Mój wiek, though the recordings for sessions 20 and 22 were faulty and were not transcribed or included in the printed version. The series includes some of the original audio recordings as well as a complete set of revised transcripts that were later printed as Mój wiek and translated into English as My century. The papers also include drafts of Miłosz's English translations (with Robert Hass) of Wat's poetry, which were published after Wat's death (Mediterranean Poems and With the Skin).

Box 162: Restricted fragile material. Reference copies may be requested. Consult Access Services for further information.

Other audio recordings of Wat in conversation with Miłosz are in the Aleksander Wat Papers.

Arranged alphabetically by title. One folder of press clippings and one folder of notes are filed at the end of the series.

Series VII: Photographs, circa 1880-1989*2.29 linear feet (6 boxes)*

Series VII consists of photographs, mostly of Czesław Miłosz, some of which include family members, friends and colleagues. Early photographs (before 1940) include family members and snapshots of Miłosz as a university student and employee of Polish Radio in Vilnius. Family photographs include portraits of members of the Kunat and Syruć families dating to the late nineteenth century and of Czesław Miłosz as a child.

Later photographs are generally of a less personal nature, though they do include snapshots of Miłosz with friends and family in addition to photographs of events and appearances. Many snapshots and portraits were taken by Czesław Miłosz's brother Andrzej, a journalist and film-maker. Fifteen folders of photographs document Miłosz's 1981 trip to Poland.

Miłosz and others wrote notes on the verso of many photographs that identify people and places portrayed.

Series VII is arranged roughly chronologically.

Series VIII: Writings of Others, 1928-1998*7.51 linear feet (19 boxes)*

Series VIII consists of manuscripts, offprints, and copies of printed writings sent to Miłosz, usually by the authors. The writings include literary analysis and reviews of Miłosz's work, academic theses, poetry, and translations. Offprints and photocopies of articles consist of articles sent to Miłosz or collected by Miłosz. Most articles are on topics related to Polish literature. The Subseries Writings about Miłosz consists of reviews and literary analyses of Miłosz's writing, including several academic theses. Accompanying annotations and correspondence document Miłosz's involvement with the development of some works (such as those of Barańczak, Fiut, Nathan and Quinn); other manuscripts were sent to Miłosz unsolicited. Of particular interest in the Subseries General Writings of Others is the memoir of Zygmunt Guze, excerpts of which were printed in Miłosz's essay "Opowieści pana Guze."

Series VIII is organized into two subseries: Writings about Miłosz and General Writings of Others. Each subseries is arranged alphabetically by author.

Series IX: Printed Material, 1929-1999*11.47 linear feet (30 boxes)*

Series IX consists of printed material collected by Miłosz. Writings of Czesław Miłosz includes clippings from newspapers and journals and individual printed broadsides. Clandestine and samizdat publications include periodicals, collections of poetry and other samizdat publications that were printed outside of the Polish censor's control during the years 1978-1989. The collection, though relatively small, is representative of clandestine publication in Poland during that time. The material documents political, literary and intellectual life under martial law in Poland and the rise of the Solidarity (Solidarność) movement. Clippings and offprints are chiefly about Miłosz and consist of newspaper and magazine articles about his travels, lectures, awards and publications. Ephemera includes announcements for Miłosz's poetry readings, lectures and other events. Photocopies of articles are chiefly on topics related to Polish Literature. Most general clippings are about Czesław Miłosz and include newspaper profiles, interviews and reviews.

Series IX is organized into five subseries: Writings of Czesław Miłosz, Clandestine and Samizdat Publications, Clippings and Offprints, Ephemera, and Photocopies of Articles.
