Biographical / Historical

Quincy Porter was born in New Haven, Connecticut in 1897. He attended Yale University as a student of Horatio Parker. After graduating from there his studies carried him to Paris, New York, and Cleveland, and his teachers included Vincent d'Indy and Ernest Bloch. As a composer and teacher himself, Porter held positions at the Cleveland Institute, Vassar College, and the New England Conservatory - where he became its director in 1942 - before returning to Yale in 1946 as professor of music. He concluded his professional career there, serving as Master of Pierson College and Battell Professor of Music Theory. He died in Bethany, Connecticut on November 12, 1966.

Included on his list of many honors are the Coolidge Medal (1943) and the Pulitzer Prize for musical composition, awarded in 1954 for his Concerto Concertante for two pianos and orchestra.

Porter was actively involved in musical activities on the national level, as a glance at the register which follows will point out. Included in this collection is a wealth of correspondence dealing with his involvement in the American Composers Alliance, the National Institute of Arts & Letters, the American Music Center, and many other organizations and societies which concerned themselves with the musical developments of this century. Porter also played a major role in the organization of the musical sessions held at the Yaddo grounds located in Saratoga Springs, New York, and the large body of Yaddo correspondence contained in this collection provides something of the flavor of the events there during the late '30s.

Scope and Contents

The Quincy Porter Papers contain the manuscript scores and sketches of Porter's musical compositions, including 2 symphonies, 9 string quartets, and other major compositions and smaller pieces. The Papers also include music copied or arranged by Porter. The correspondence contains letters to and from Porter and other individuals, publishers, performing organizations, and schools and universities. Porter's life and work are further documented by: programs and newspaper clippings; published articles and books; photographs; medals; and scrapbooks.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence

1897-1975 -- 18 Boxes

An attempt has been made to arrange the correspondence into logical subdivisions according to subject matter and content, so as to aid the researcher in dealing with the rather large number of items in this series. This manner of organization hopefully preserves much of Porter's own attitude toward his correspondence, as many of these subdivisions were already in existence in the collection as he left it. (The Pulitzer Prize congratulatory letters, for example, were completely intact as a unit.) Because of Porter's special association with Yale in the capacity of a college master as well as faculty member, category (I) has been created to include correspondence dealing specifically with Pierson College or the Yale School of Music. Also included here are letters of congratulation from outside the Yale community which were addressed to Porter upon his appointment as master.

Within the subject-oriented categories--such as (C) Concerning Publication--letters to and from Porter have been grouped together and listed alphabetically by the name of the company, organization, etc., while the letters in section A (general) have been subdivided into those written to Porter and those written by Porter.

Cross references: Cross references have been provided throughout the correspondence to assist the researcher in locating specific correspondence. It should be noted that references have not been provided for letters falling into two categories:

(B) Congratulatory letters-Pulitzer Prize

(K) Lois Porter's correspondence

Since these categories contain letters from persons closely associated with Porter in his various musical activities, it would seem rather redundant to provide individual references for these sections.

(scrapbook): The indication (scrapbook) which appears after many entries in the register is an explanation of the fact that what appears in the correspondence files is a photocopy of the original, the original being found in one of the several scrapbooks (series IX). Information as to the specific location-including page number in scrapbook--of the original has been notated on each of the photocopies.
