George Meredith, 1828-1909

George Meredith (1828-1909), English novelist and poet. His novels include The Ordeal of Richard Feverel (1859), The Egoist (1879), and Diana of the Crossways (1885). His sonnet sequence depicting the breakdown of an unhappy marriage, Modern Love (1862), was thought to be based on his own unhappy first marriage to Mary Peacock Nicholls (1821-1861).

Description of the Papers

The George Meredith collection contains manuscripts, annotated proofs and printed works, correspondence, and other papers documenting the life and works of George Meredith. Contents include a complete set of the Chapman and Hall edition of Meredith's Works, extensively interleaved with corrections and annotations in the author's hand; the autograph manuscript of The adventures of Harry Richmond (1871); and over 200 letters and transcripts of letters, including 26 to Frederic Chapman, 17 to Theodore Watts-Dunton, and 45 to Augustus Jessopp.
