George Sklar (1908-1988)

George Sklar (Yale 1929) was an American playwright, screenwriter, and novelist known for his involvement with social protest theater during the Great Depression. In 1933, he cofounded the Theatre Union, a collective of leftist writers and activists that produced plays for a working-class audience. He also served on the board of the Federal Theatre Project, a New Deal initiative that staged many of his plays, including Life and Death of an American (1939). Sklar's first play, Merry-Go-Round (1932), written with Albert Maltz while they studied at Yale, was adapted into the film Afraid to Talk. Sklar and Maltz also collaborated on the anti-war drama Peace on Earth (1933), the first play produced by the newly established Theatre Union. Several of his works depicted racism and race relations, including Stevedore (1934), written with Paul Peters, and And People All Around (1967). Sklar and Peters again collaborated on Parade, a satirical revue, in 1935; his other plays include a Broadway adaptation of the 1944 film Laura (1947), written with Vera Caspary, and Brown Pelican (1974), which explored environmentalism.

In the 1940s, Sklar moved to Los Angeles to write screenplays for Hollywood films such as First Comes Courage (1943). He was blacklisted from the industry after refusing to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1949. He also wrote novels such as The Two Worlds of Johnny Truro (1947), The Promising Young Men (1952), and The Identity of Dr. Frazier (1961).

Born Gidolio Sklar in Meriden, Connecticut, Sklar received a B.A. from Yale University in 1929 and graduated from the Yale School of Drama in 1931, where he studied under George Pierce Baker. Sklar married Miriam Blecher in 1935, with whom he had three children: Judith Rasminsky, and Daniel and Zachary Sklar.

Miriam Blecher (1912-1979)

Miriam Blecher was an American dancer and choreographer who was prominent in the New York modern dance movement during the Great Depression. In 1932, she cofounded the Workers Dance League, a left-wing umbrella organization that grew out of her involvement in the Communist Party, with other Jewish dancers such as Edith Segal, Anna Sokolow, and Nadia Chilkovsky. That same year, Blecher also established the New Dance Group, a collective of politically-active modern dancers from Hanya Holm's studio. Blecher choreographed the anti-Nazi piece Van der Lubbe's Head (1934) while working at the New Dance Group, and she later served as the organization's director for three years.

Blecher was born in New York City to Jewish immigrants from Austria-Hungary. She graduated from Hunter College and studied dance at the Henry Street Settlement House under Martha Graham and Louis Horst. After moving to Los Angeles with her husband, Blecher taught children's dance classes and held dance therapy workshops.

Scope and Contents

The collection contains correspondence, writings, photographs, printed material, personal papers, and other papers by or relating to George Sklar and Miriam Blecher. Among the correspondents are theater associates of Sklar such as Vera Caspary, Albert Maltz, and Paul Peters, and Blecher's modern dance colleagues, including Lily Mehlman and Estelle Oringer, as well as members of the Sklar and Blecher families. A number of letters reference the House Un-American Activities Committee and the blacklisting of Sklar and other writers. Materials documenting his career as a playwright include drafts, reviews, and theater ephemera for Merry-Go-Round, Life and Death of an American, And People All Around, Brown Pelican, and other plays, some of which were produced by the Union Theatre and Federal Theatre Project. Also present are performance photographs from Sklar and Peters's Stevedore, featuring images of African American actors Canada Lee, Georgette Harvey, and Leigh Whipper, and another of their works, the satirical revue Parade. In addition, the collection contains novels and short stories by Sklar. Papers documenting Blecher's work as a dance instructor include lesson plans, class notes, correspondence, promotional cards and fliers for her dance studio, and one cassette tape related to four-year-old students. Personal papers of George Sklar include documents from an FBI investigative file on Sklar and Blecher and papers related to a Writers Guild pension for blacklisted authors, address books, financial, legal, and medical records, clippings, and books from his library.

Professional Correspondence

This subseries contains letters to George Sklar from colleagues and friends including Albert Maltz and his wife, author Margaret Larkin, Paul Peters, and Guy Endore, as well as literary agents Barthold Fles and Max Wilkinson. Maltz's letters concern his collaborations with Sklar, public and critical reception of their joint and solo projects in the United States and abroad, and plays, screenplays, and other works in progress by Maltz and Larkin. He also discusses events relating to the "Hollywood Ten," the House Un-American Activities Committee, mutual friends who testified before the committee such as Michael Blankfort and Edward Dmytryk, and life among other blacklisted Hollywood figures in Mexico. Larkin writes about similar topics. Letters from Peters address his career as a blacklisted writer; his play Nat Turner and proposed revivals; the Theatre Union and his opinions of contemporary plays; and politics and race relations. The subseries additionally includes letters from agents and publishers such as Monica McCall, Inc., Crown Publishers, and Dramatists Play Service, telegrams from Herbert Biberman, Jules Dassin, and others regarding Sklar's plays, royalties and financial records, and some ephemera. Also present is a group of correspondence and printed material concerning productions of And People All Around and other plays by Sklar in the Soviet Union in the early 1970s.

Personal Correspondence

This subseries contains correspondence between George and Miriam Sklar, letters from their friends and colleagues, and family correspondence. Included is a significant amount of correspondence from George and Miriam to their daughter Judy, dating from the 1950s to 1980s, which cover a range of topics such as the couple's social activities, George's writing and relationship with collaborator Vera Caspary, and Miriam's teaching. Letters in the late 1950s occasionally reference George's blacklisting and the House Un-American Activities Committee. In the 1960s, George addresses the 16th Street Baptist Church bombing, assassinations of Medgar Evers and John F. Kennedy, the Watts Rebellion, Vietnam War, and other cultural and political events. He further writes about the challenges of bringing And People All Around to Broadway and theater agent's Audrey Wood advice regarding other avenues for producing the play, as well as his anxiety about returning to the theater after a long absence. Other correspondents include George's theater associates, such as Caspary, authors and screenwriters Guy Endore and Daniel Fuchs, editor Pat McNeese Mancini, and literary agent Evarts Ziegler, in addition to Miriam's colleagues Estelle Oringer, Lily Mehlman, and modern dance choreographer and activist Si-Lan Chen (Sylvia) Leyda.
