Biography

Paul Kagan, photographer and author of the book New World Utopias, was born in 1943. After receiving a degree in history from the University of California at Berkeley in 1965, he worked as a television news writer, photographer, graphic artist, and magazine art director. Kagan spent five years researching New World Utopias: A Photographic History of the Search for Community (New York: Penguin Books, 1975). Initially, the National Institute of Mental Health provided funds for Kagan to photograph the remains of California 'utopias'; a few years into the project the California Historical Society gave him funds to research and collect the records and contemporary photographs of those communities. During this time Kagan organized the Utopian Studies Center at the California Historical Society Library (San Francisco). At the time of the book's publication, Kagan described himself as writer/researcher and still photographer for the Television Health Information Project at University of California Medical Center, San Francisco. Paul Kagan died in New York in 1993.

Scope and Contents

Chiefly photographs created and copied by Kagan while conducting research for his book, New World Utopias: A Photographic History of the Search for Community (New York: Penguin Books, 1975). The photographs document nineteenth and twentieth century utopian communities, most located in California, with others in New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and Tennessee. The collection includes material he collected about utopian communities, including audiotapes of interviews and related events, as well as drawings and photographs. The collection also includes examples of photography and graphic design that Kagan created for traditional and alternative newspapers, as well as examples of some of his book reviews and other writings. A small group of material documents social action at the University of California, Berkeley, and in the San Francisco Bay Area during the 1960s.

Utopian communities and other groups represented in the collection include an Amish community, Ananda Ashrama, Caspar Compound, Divine Light Mission, Esoteric Fraternity, The Farm, Fundación Indra Devi, Fountaingrove, Fountain of the World, Halcyon, Holy City, Icaria Speranza, Kaweah Colony, Krotona (including Happy Valley School), Lama Foundation, Lemurian Fellowship, Llano del Rio, The Lord's Land, Pisgah Faith Home, Pisgah Grande, Point Loma, Rosicrucian Fellowship, Questhaven Retreat, Self-Realization Golden World Colony, Table Mountain Ranch, Tassajara Zen Mountain Center, Theosophical Society (Pasadena), Unification Church, and Vedanta Temple (Santa Barbara).

Collection Contents

Series I: Photographs of Utopian Communities, 1968-1976

3.38 linear feet (19 boxes)

This series mainly consists of photographic materials created by Kagan in the course of researching New World Utopias: A Photographic History of the Search for Community. A small group of photographs from unidentified sources is also available in Series II. Other Material Related to Utopian Communities.

This series is organized into three subseries: Photographs by Kagan, Oversize Photographic Prints by Kagan, and Copy Photographs.

Photographs by Kagan

This subseries chiefly consists of photographic negatives, contact sheets, and work prints created by Kagan related to utopian communities. Many of the photographs document the ruins or former sites of communities.

Kagan visited some sites more than once. Some rolls of negatives document multiple sites and have been filed together to reflect the rolls.

The subseries also includes a notebook by Kagan that provides background for some of the images, as well as material he copied from others.

Organized into two subseries: Notebook and Original Images by Kagan.

b. 1, f. 1

Notebook

Spiral-bound notebook with notes about photographs created by Kagan and copied by him, as well as research notes about utopian communities in California.

Notebook also includes draft essays about Tassajara Zen Mountain Center and the United Farm Workers, as well as a review of Janwillem Van de Wetering, A Glimpse of Nothingness: Experiences in an American Zen Community (Boston: Houghton Mifflin St. Martin's Griffin, 1975). Also includes notes related to the custody of his daughter, Colorado M. Kagan (born 1969).

1972

January-1979

Original Images by Kagan

Photographs by Kagan of sites and individuals related to utopian communities. A portion of images appeared in his New World Utopias: A Photographic History of the Search for Community (New York: Penguin Books, 1975).

Arranged chronologically.
