Biographical / Historical

William Henry Nassau de Zuylestein, 4th Earl of Rochford (1717-1781) was a British diplomat of Anglo-Dutch descent, the son of Frederick Nassau van Zuylestein, 3rd Earl of Rochford, and his wife Elizabeth Savage. He was born in St Osyth, Essex, attended Eton College (1725-1732) and the Collège de Genève, where he became fluent in French; he took the title as the 4th Earl of Rochford when his father died in 1738. After various court appointments in England, Rochford held ambassadorial posts in Turin (1749-1755), Madrid (1763-1766) and Paris (1766-1768), and served as Secretary of State in both the Northern (1768-1770) and Southern (1770-1775) departments. He retired from service in 1775, and died at St Osyth on September 29, 1781.

Scope and Contents

The William Henry Zuylestein, Earl of Rochford, Papers contain correspondence and documents concerning his government service and personal affairs. The more than forty letters are primarily from diplomatic colleagues including George Cressner in Bonn, Sir John Goodricke in Stockholm, Fulke Greville in Munich, Sir Robert Gunning in Copenhagen, Sir William Hamilton in Naples, William Petty, Marquis of Lansdowne in Paris, David Murray, Earl of Lansdowne in Vienna, Andrew Mitchell in Berlin, William Norton in Bern, Robert Walpole in Madrid, Ralph Woodford in Hamburg, James Wright in Venice, Thomas Wroughton in Warsaw, and Joseph Dover, Baron Yorke, in The Hague. There are two reports from the Battle of Tiruvannamalai in South India, on September 25-27, 1767, and other letters concerning some of his real estate transactions. A small group of Other Papers include some writings, accounts of British government expenses (1769-1777), and an ancestral document in Dutch from 1688 signed by King William III, then the Prince of Orange.

Arrangement

Organized into two series: I. Correspondence, 1766-1780. II. Other Papers, 1688-1823.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1766–1780

36 Folders

The letters in the series are primarily those received by Rochford from his diplomatic colleagues, but in the folder for William Petty, Marquis of Lansdowne there are also drafts of Rochford's replies. Many of the letters are simply congratulations to him on overseas appointments, notably as ambassador to Paris in 1766, or sending news and intelligence, sometimes with parts in cypher.

The folder for the Naples envoy William Hamilton holds three letters from him; his letter of February 16, 1768—sent from Rome—asks Rochford to review the first volume of his Antiquités Etrusques, Grecques et Romaines Tirées du Cabinet de M. Hamilton, which he has sent by packet, and to then send it right away to the King so he would have it before the cargo of books Hamilton has shipped to London arrives. Hamilton describes the author, Pierre d'Hancarville, as a "French man of genius [sic] whom I found in distress at Naples" and writes that the work is "being executed in a new manner." The four-volume work carries a publication date of 1766 and 1767 though his 1768 letter reveals that: "Another volume will be delivered in May next, and two others are almost ready for the Press."

Other non-diplomatic letters include two copies of letters sent from the engineers D. P. Desmaretz and Andres Frazer to William Petty Fitzmaurice, Marquess of Lansdowne, then the Earl of Shelburne and Secretary of State for the Southern Department, giving their analyses of the navigation issues in the English Channel at Dunkirk. and one from Bishop Robert Lowth, who sought Rochford's support for Benjamin Kennicott's work in Paris on an international collation of Hebrew manuscripts.

Rochford's real estate dealings are the focus of a letter from lawyer Peter Holford of Westonbirt, who offers to assist with the transaction regarding Rochford's payoff of the mortgage of the Essex estate. Another land transaction is documented in the set of letters from the Ipswich lawyer Samuel Kilderbee, Lincoln's Inn lawyer Daniel Macnamara, and Richard Rigby.
