Processing Information

This collection received a basic level of processing, including rehousing and minimal organization. Information included in the Description of Papers note and Collection Contents section is drawn from information supplied with the collection and from an initial survey of the contents. Folder titles appearing in the contents list below are often based on those provided by the creator or previous custodian. Titles have not been verified against the contents of the folders in all cases. Otherwise, folder titles are supplied by staff during initial processing.

Biographical / Historical

Born in 1952, James Balog is an American photojournalist whose images capture the relationship between humans and nature. In 2007, he started the Extreme Ice Survey (EIS), one of the most wide-ranging photographic ground study of glaciers ever made.

A portfolio of over one million single-frame photographs have been taken with dozens of cameras at glaciers in Antarctica, Greenland, Alaska, Iceland, the Alps, and the Rocky Mountains. The cameras shoot every hour during daylight, year-round, accumulating a detailed record of the ongoing changes glaciers and ice sheets experience due to climate change. The EIS has prompted public talks, exhibitions, and science and policy conferences worldwide.

Balog's work has appeared in numerous publications including National Geographic, The New York Times, and Life. He is the author of several books and is a founding Fellow of the International League of Conservation Photographers.
