Biographical / Historical

The Jane Coffin Childs Memorial Fund for Medical Research (JCC Fund) was established in 1937 by the family of Jane Coffin Childs after her passing due to cancer. Because of Yale University's investment into cancer research and the establishment of the Atypical Growth Unit, the family selected Yale Medical School as the home of the fund and endowed 3.5 million dollars to Yale University. Since then, the JCC Fund has disbursed grants to postdoctoral fellows and professors performing biomedical research relating to the causes and treatments of human diseases, especially cancer. The fund has supported over 1600 research projects at universities, hospitals, and research institutes globally since its establishment. Information in this historical note was primarily drawn from the Jane Coffin Childs Memorial Fund website, The Jane Coffin Childs Memorial Fund for Medical Research: Celebrating 75 Years of Research, 1937-2012, and the grant files found in Series 2026-A-0010: Grant Files.
