Dudley Fitts (1903-1968)

Dudley Fitts was a poet, translator, literary critic, and educator. Fitts was perhaps best known for his translations of classical texts. He translated several works by Aristophanes, including Lysistrata (1954), The Frogs (1955), The Birds (1957), and Ladies' Day (1959) and, in collaboration with Robert Fitzgerald, he translated Euripides' The Alcestis (1936) and Sophocles' Antigone (1939) and Oedipus Rex (1949). He is also the author of Poems, 1929-1936 (1937) and editor of An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry (1942).

Fitts was born April 28, 1903, in Boston and educated at Harvard. He taught at the Choate School from 1927 to 1941 and then served as an instructor of English at Phillips Academy from 1941 onward.

Scope and Contents

The Dudley Fitts Papers consist chiefly of material relating to the production of the first American edition of An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry (New Directions, 1942). Fitts served as editor for Spanish poetry in the bilingual anthology, selecting material and translators, and supervising and editing translations. The papers include both correspondence and writings, the bulk of which date from 1941 to 1943. There are letters with contributing authors and translators, representatives of the sponsoring agency, the Committee on Publications of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and the publisher. The writings include typescript copies of poems, drafts of translations, many of which are corrected and annotated, proofs, and other materials.

In addition to the material relating to the anthology, there are letters from other writers, concerning literary matters, and drafts and proofs to translations by Fitts of several classical texts.

Arrangement

The collection is organized into two series: I. Correspondence, 1928-1968. II. Writings, 1935-1967.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1928-1968

1.04 linear feet (3 boxes)

Correspondence consists chiefly of letters relating to the first American edition of An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry (New Directions, 1942). Fitts served as editor for Spanish poetry in the bilingual anthology, selecting material and translators, and supervising and editing translations. There are both original incoming letters and carbon copies of outgoing letters, dating from 1941 to 1943, with contributing authors and translators, representatives of the sponsoring agency, the Committee on Publications of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and the publisher. Contributing authors include Jorge Carrera Andrade, Alejandro Carrión, Eugenio Florit, Carlos Izaguirre, Jesús Lara, Rafael Méndez Dorich, Hipólito Quell Sánchez, and others. Translators include Angel Flores, Joseph Leonard Grucci, H. R. Hays, Langston Hughes, Rolfe Humphries, Muna Lee, Lloyd Mallan, Richard O'Connell, Donald Walsh, and others. Correspondence with authors and translators concern submissions, and some include copies of original poems, drafts of translations, and lists of corrections. Correspondence with Robert S. Benjamin, John Peale Bishop, Dudley Poore, and other members of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs documents production of the anthology.

Other noteworthy correspondents include T. S. Eliot, Archibald MacLeish, Thomas Mann, William Somerset Maugham, Ezra Pound, and Gertrude Stein.

Correspondence is in English and Spanish.

Series II: Writings, 1935-1967*3.13 linear feet (8 boxes)*

Writings consist chiefly of material relating to the first American edition of An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry (New Directions, 1942). Fitts served as editor for Spanish poetry in the bilingual anthology, selecting material and translators, and supervising and editing translations. Materials include typescript copies of poems, drafts of translations, many of which are corrected and annotated, proofs, and other materials. Copies of poems and drafts of translations, housed in boxes 4-7, are arranged alphabetically by author.

In addition to the material relating to An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry, there are drafts, proofs, and other materials relating to several translations by Fitts. These translations, some done in collaboration with Robert Fitzgerald, include texts by Aristophanes (Lysistrata, The Frogs, The Birds, and Ladies' Day), Euripides (The Alcestis), and Sophocles (Antigone and Oedipus Rex).

Arranged alphabetically by title.
