CREATOR: Lowenfels, Walter, 1897-1976

TITLE: Walter Lowenfels papers

DATES: 1897-1979

BULK DATES: 1930-1976

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 85.72 linear feet (184 boxes)

LANGUAGE: Chiefly in English, some writings in Russian, Spanish, and French.

SUMMARY: The Walter Lowenfels Papers document the life and work of the writer, journalist, editor, activist, and member of the Communist Party USA, Walter Lowenfels. The papers consist of correspondence, writings, writings of others, photographs, personal papers, printed material, and other papers spanning the years 1897-1979, with the bulk of the material dating from 1930-1976. Correspondence, writings, and writings of others comprise the bulk of the papers. The correspondence records his personal and professional relationships and chronicles his 1953 and 1954 trials for sedition and conspiracy and his publication process. Writings document Lowenfels's work as a writer, editor and anthologist, including drafts of his prose, poetry, drama, essays, and articles. The writings also document his work for the Pennsylvania edition of the Daily Worker. The writings of others reveal Lowenfels's work editing anthologies and collections of works by other writers. Photographs include snapshots of Lowenfels, his family and friends, his home and other subjects. Printed material contains clippings, tearsheets, ephemera, and other printed material concerning Lowenfels and other subjects of his interest. A small amount of personal papers includes biographical information and files on his finances and estate.

Biographical Note

Walter Lowenfels was born on May 10, 1897 in New York City. His family owned the successful butter manufacturing business Hotel Bar Butter, which provided a comfortable upbringing for Lowenfels. After graduating from preparatory school in 1914, he served in the military during World War I. Following his service, Lowenfels worked for his family's company and wrote poetry, an interest he developed while in the military. Some early poems appeared in local newspapers and in 1925 he published his first collection of poems, Episodes & Epistles. In 1924 Lowenfels met Lillian Apotheker, who co-funded Episodes & Epistles, and moved to Europe with her after he decided to focus on writing and quit the family business. They married in 1926 in Europe. The couple spent time in Florence and settled in Paris, meeting many influential writers, including Henry Miller, T.S. Eliot and Ford Madox Ford, and for a brief time lived with composer George Antheil. Lowenfels's writing was well received and he appeared in journals and little magazines, such as transition and This Quarter. Nancy Cunard admired his poetry and in 1930 published his collection

Appolinaire: An Elegy, through her Hours Press. In 1931, he shared This Quarter's Richard Aldington Poetry Prize with e.e. cummings.

While in Paris, Lowenfels met writer Michael Fraenkel. Fraenkel and Lowenfels became close friends and in 1930 co-founded the Carrefour Press. That same year, they published the pamphlet Anonymous: The Need for Anonymity, a manifesto that demanded total anonymity in art and in turn started the "anonymous movement." Lowenfels anonymously published through Carrefour a musical play, U SA with Music: An Operatic Tragedy. The play's anonymity was short-lived since he and Fraenkel were forced to reveal authorship in a 1932 plagiarism suit against composer George Gershwin for his musical Of Thee I Sing. Carrefour lost the case and began to identify published authors, thereby ending the anonymous movement. Lowenfels continued to write poetry and began to edit poetry of others. His interest in politics increased and his poetry began to feature his leftist political ideas, focusing on the rise of fascism in Germany and Italy. The Lowenfels' first three daughters were born in France, Michal and twins Manna and Judy.

Lowenfels and his family returned to the United States in 1934, moving to Mays Landing, New Jersey. Lowenfels returned to his father's butter business and worked alongside his brother, Albert. During that time, Lowenfels introduced new ideas to the business; he invented a new waxed paper packaging for butter and he applied date stamping to improve the butter's freshness. At night and on the weekends, he continued to write poetry. In 1937, he published Steel 1937, a collection of poetry commemorating the steelworkers killed by US Steel during the 1937 Little Steel strike. Following the publication, Lowenfels quit writing poetry. In 1938, he left the family business again and moved to Philadelphia where he began writing for the Pennsylvania edition of the Daily Worker and became increasingly involved in the Civil Rights and Communist movements. He soon became editor and held that job through 1954. His social activism and writing focused on civil and worker's rights. Through the 1940s, he sometimes worked only part-time for the paper, while also selling intercommunication devices and relying on his wife's teaching salary. The couple's family grew to four daughters. In 1951, Lowenfels suffered a heart attack and recovered fully. The same year, his family moved to a cabin in Weymouth, New Jersey.

In July of 1953, Lowenfels was arrested with eight others (they were known as "The Philadelphia Nine") and accused of sedition and conspiracy to overthrow the United States government under the Smith Act. While planning how they could best strategize their defense, the group agreed that Lowenfels should return to writing poetry to raise money. After seventeen years, Lowenfels began to write poetry again and started to translate others' poetry from French and Italian into English. The group was convicted but the government's case was overturned in August of 1953. He was arrested again in 1954 for distributing "subversive" materials and was imprisoned at the Holmsburg County Prison in Philadelphia for treason. His conviction was overturned for lack of evidence in 1954. That same year, he published A Prisoner's Poems for Amnesty. In the midst of Lowenfels's arrests and trial, Lillian was asked to sign a loyalty oath. She pled the Fifth Amendment and was fired from her teaching job. After his release from prison, Lowenfels quit the Daily Worker and devoted himself to writing and editing the writing of others.

Through the 1950s and 1960s, he worked prolifically as an anthologist, focusing on writings that reflected Marxism and opposition to political repression. He published an anthology of Walt Whitman's poetry called Walt Whitman's Civil War (1961); Where Is Vietnam? (1967), a collection of protest poetry for which he is perhaps best known; and In the Time of Revolution (1969), a collection of civil rights poems by African Americans. He was active in the anti-Vietnam War peace movement and edited the anti-war publication Dialog. To protest the war, Lowenfels joined with other writers and editors and refused to pay taxes. An anthology of Lowenfels's own poems edited by Robert Gover, The Portable Walter, was published in 1968, and included the second half of his autobiography My Many Lives. In 1970, Lowenfels co-wrote The Life of Fraenkel's Death with Howard McCord and continued to edit poetry anthologies, publishing several collections, including From the Belly of the Shark: a new anthology of Native Americans; poems by Chicanos, Eskimos, Hawaiians, Indians, Puerto Ricans in the U.S.A., with related poems by others (1973); and For Neruda, For Chile: an international anthology (1975).

Lowenfels died on July 8, 1976 in Tarrytown, New York.

Collection Contents

Series I: Correspondence, 1920-1979

21 linear feet (50 boxes)

General Correspondence contains incoming letters to Lowenfels and carbon copies of his outgoing letters. The series documents his career as a poet, editor, and anthologist as well as his personal relationships with family, friends, and colleagues. Some letters include enclosures of poems and writings of others sent to Lowenfels and are noted when they occur. A significant portion of the correspondence is identified by first name only and a smaller amount of correspondence remains unidentified. Included within general correspondence are letters from literary figures such as Henry Miller, Langston Hughes, Gwendolyn Brooks, Nancy Cunard, and Lawrence Ferlinghetti, and musicians and composers such as George Antheil, Pete Seeger, Lee Hays, and Woody Guthrie.

Correspondence by Subject contains correspondence regarding specific topics or incidents grouped together by Lowenfels. Included in the subseries are files of correspondence relating to Lowenfels's 1953 and 1954 trials for sedition and plotting to overthrow the government. This correspondence includes incoming and outgoing correspondence with Lowenfels, letters from Lillian Lowenfels, and copies of letters written by third parties to Judge Cullen Ganey, President Dwight Eisenhower, and others in support of amnesty for Lowenfels.

Third-Party Correspondence contains correspondence between other parties, including members of Walter Lowenfels's family and correspondence regarding his estate and posthumous publications, as well as the incoming and outgoing correspondence of his wife Lillian Lowenfels.

Additional correspondence is located in Series II. Writings and Series III. Writings of Others.

Series I. is organized into three subseries: General Correspondence, Correspondence by Subject, and Third-Party Correspondence.

Series II: Writings, 1926-1976

52 linear feet (92 boxes)

The series contains the poetry, prose, and dramatic writings of Walter Lowenfels and drafts of works compiled and edited by Lowenfels for poetry anthologies and editions of Walt Whitman's writings. Writings are typescript drafts with typescript and holograph corrections and notes. Among the writings are printed materials including marketing materials, newspaper clippings, and reviews, a small amount of correspondence, proofs and other related materials. Of note are Lowenfels's editions of the works of Walt Whitman, including The Tenderest Lover: The Erotic Poetry of Walt Whitman and Walt Whitman's Civil War. Both books are thematic explorations of published and unpublished writings by Whitman with commentary by Lowenfels. Lowenfels also wrote an extensive autobiography, entitled My Many Lives, the second half of which was published in The Portable Walter. To My Imaginary Daughter, published in 1954, is a small book of letters, memoirs, poems, and anecdotes that is in part autobiographical and documents Lowenfels's relationships with his own daughters. Among the many anthologies Lowenfels compiled and published in his later years, Where Is Vietnam? received the greatest attention, as it was a collection of poems protesting the war. A massive work, Autobiography of an Empire was unpublished in his lifetime. Lowenfels compiled and intended by Lowenfels to be a documentary history of the United States. Also included in this series are drafts of the anonymously published USA With Music, The Life of Fraenkel's Death, Some Deaths, Steel 1937, Sonnets of Love and Liberty and other essays and poems.

Lowenfels frequently clipped or taped typescript fragments onto pages as corrections. Where possible, paperclips and tape have been left intact to protect the integrity of these corrections. A substantial amount of notes, drafts, and duplicates remain unidentified and unsorted. Within these unidentified files, fragments of multiple works are frequently filed together with no apparent order.

Writings are arranged alphabetically by title. Boxes of unsorted poems, anthology materials, and autobiographical materials are filed at the end of the series.

Series III: Writings of Others, 1941-1976*6 linear feet (14 boxes)*

Writings of Others contains the poems, short stories, essays and plays of other writers in typescript, photocopy, holograph and printed forms. Some items are autographed by the authors. These writings were likely sent to or otherwise collected by Lowenfels as gifts, for criticism, or for submission to publications and anthologies he compiled and edited. Included in this series are drafts of Who Is Lowenfels, an unpublished biography written by Dick Lourie, and essays and translations by Lillian Lowenfels.

Additional writings of others are enclosures with letters in Series I. Correspondence and in Series II. Writings, as anthology source material.

Writings of Others is organized into two subseries: Writings by Author and Writings by Unknown Authors.
