Ruth Ford (1911-2009)

Ruth Ford was born in Brookhaven, Mississippi in 1911. In the 1930s, after graduating from the University of Mississippi with bachelor's and master's degrees, she moved to New York City where she was introduced to writers, musicians, and other artists by her brother Charles Henri Ford, himself a poet and artist living in New York. Ruth Ford was photographed by Carl Van Vechten, Man Ray, and Cecil Beaton, and as a fashion model she appeared in magazines including Harper's Bazaar, Mademoiselle, and Vogue. She had a successful acting career, performing in stage productions including The Shoemaker's Holiday (1938), No Exit (1946), Requiem for a Nun (1959), and Harold and Maude (1980). As a film actress, she had roles in over two dozen films, including Secrets of the Lone Wolf (1941) and The Keys of the Kingdom (1944). On television she appeared in several productions of The United States Steel Hour (1954-1961) as well as numerous other series and made-for-television movies. She was well known for the modern-day salons that she held in her apartment in the Dakota apartment building where her guests included Truman Capote, Tennessee Williams, William Faulkner, Stephen Sondheim, Edward Albee, and many others. Her first marriage to Peter van Eyck ended in divorce. She married the actor Zachary Scott in 1952, and they were the parents of one daughter, Shelly Scott. Ruth Ford died in New York City in 2009.
