Biographical / Historical

ISAAC BIRD, 1793-1876 (Y.1816)

ISAAC BIRD, son of Isaac and Rhoda (Selleck) Bird, was born in Salisbury, Conn., June 19, 1793.

He spent the year after graduation as a teacher in the academy in West Nottingham, Md., and in Nov., 1817, entered Andover Theol. Seminary. His three years there were passed in close companionship with his classmates, William Goodell and Daniel Temple, the associates of his future missionary life, and the three friends together offered themselves on graduating to the American Board for work among the heathen. Mr. Bird spent two years in the service of the Board in this country, and was ordained, with Mr. Temple, at North Bridgewater, Mass., Oct. 31, 1821. He was married, Nov. 18, 1822, to Ann, daughter of Capt. Wm. Parker, of Dunbarton, N. H., and they embarked the next month with Mr. and Mrs. Goodell for Malta. He passed the succeeding winter in Jerusalem, and, the next 13 years in or near Beirut, Syria. In the summer of 1836 he returned to the United States, on account of the long continued ill-health of his wife, and was for the next two years employed as an agent of the American Board. In Sept., 1839, he began to give instruction in the Theol. Seminary in Gilmanton, N. H., where he remained for six years, during the last part of the time serving as Professor of Sacred Literature. From 1846 to 1869 he conducted a family school in Hartford, Conn., and then removed to Great Barrington, where he died at the residence of his son, June 13, 1876, at the age of 83. His wife survives him. Of their ten children four died in infancy. One son graduated at Dartmouth College in 1844, and another at this College in 1848. The eldest son is a missionary on Mount Lebanon, and the eldest daughter is the wife of Rev. Dr. Van Lennep, so long a missionary in the Turkish Empire.

From Yale College Obituary Record, 1876.

JAMES BIRD, 1826-1901 (Y. 1848)

JAMES BIRD, son of Isaac and Ann (Parker) Bird, was born September 28, 1826, in Beyroot, Syria, where his parents were missionaries of the American Board. Owing to the failure of his mother's health he came to America with his parents when he was nine years old, and entered college from Gilmanton, N. H., where his father was Professor in the Theological Seminary.

Immediately after graduation he joined his father in carrying on the Pavilion Family School for boys in Hartford, Conn. In 1869 he moved to Great Barrington, Mass., and continued the school under the name of Sedgwick Institute. Ten years later he removed to Auburndale, Mass., where he remained eight years, and during a portion of this time received a few young boys into his family and taught them. In 1887 he returned to Great Barrington, and resumed teaching in Sedgwick Institute with his nephew, Edward J. Van Lennep, who was then in charge. Later he was in the real estate and insurance business, and clerk of the district court of southern Berkshire. While on, his way to the court house on the evening of May 17, 1901, he fell from a railroad trestle near his home and was killed. He was in his 75th year. He united with the Center Church in Hartford, Conn., in 1852.

He married, on October 10, 1855, Elise D., eldest daughter of Rev. William Goodell, D.D. (Dartm. 1817), missionary to Turkey. Mrs. Bird died in 1895, and an only daughter at the age of 15 years in 1876. On April 27, 1898, Mr. Bird married Cornelia Helen Pattison, of Great Barrington, who survives him, together with a sister in Great Barrington and a brother, Rev. William Bird (Dartm 1844), who has been for forty-eight years a missionary in Syria. A sister married Rev. Henry J. Van Lennep (Amherst 1837), formerly for thirty years a missionary in Turkey.

From Yale College Obituary Record, 1901.

Scope and Contents

The Isaac Bird Papers contain correspondence, journals, sermons, and miscellaneous papers of Isaac Bird and other Bird family members relating for the most part to missionary activity in Malta and the Levant in the first half of the nineteenth century. Bird, a Congregational minister, studied at Yale College and Andover Theological Seminary before being sent overseas by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions in 1822. His correspondence, approximately 140 letters, spans his career. Most of his correspondents are Yale and Andover graduates who also served in the Near East, including Josiah Brewer (1796-1872), Pliny Fisk (1792-1825), William Goodell (1792-1867), and Eli Smith (1801-1857). Family members with whom Bird corresponded include his wife, Ann Parker, his son James, and his brother-in-law James Kimball.

Bird's studies at Yale and Andover are described in the early portion of the correspondence, and in the first few of his journals (folders 16-20). Also in the collection are a memorandum book of debates and sermons at Yale (1812-1816), and two notebooks of lectures Bird attended at Andover. The subject matter of all of these papers is largely the state of religion and religious studies in New England in general and at Yale, Andover, and Harvard in particular. Included in the correspondence are a number of letters exchanged between student groups and churches at those three institutions (folders 1-3).

Missionary activities in the Near East form the subject matter of the bulk of the correspondence and of Bird's journals. The papers offer a view of missionary life in Malta, Syria, Palestine, Istanbul, and Egypt, and describe the trials and tribulations of Bird and his fellow workers. Their relations, both good and bad, with local ethnic and religious groups are documented, as are the activities of their converts, disputes with the Board of Commissioners, the ravages of epidemics, and the effects of the Ottoman Empire's foreign affairs, wars, and internal politics. The correspondence includes such items as a French description of the battle of Navarino (folder 8) and a variety of documents in Arabic; further Arabic letters and documents may be found in folder 45. Bird's journals for the period 1822-1830 contain very detailed descriptions of his work, colleagues, and adventures. There are occasional items of correspondence bound in, and copies of letters and documents in Arabic and Italian.

Other papers of Isaac Bird preserved here are a commonplace book, copies of the Gospels in shorthand, a few receipts and certificates, a passport, a photograph, and a printed advertisement for the Theological Seminary in Gilmanton, New Hampshire. Bird's son James is represented by five letters (1845-1847) describing his life at Yale in the class of 1848 and by a photograph. Also in the collection are a photograph, sermons, and other writings by Jonathan Bird (1747-1813; Y:1768), sermons of Samuel Bird (d. 1784) and James Diman (1707-1788), and, finally, a folder of notes compiled by E. J. Van Lennep about the Isaac Bird Papers and the people who created them.

These papers came to Yale largely through purchases from E. J. Van Lennep, 1932-1945, and from Mrs. William Nesbit, Jr., 1947, 1958, and 1960.

A partial index to the correspondence is provided at the end of this register.
