Antarctica prototypes
9 boxes

These materials document the Keoughs' search for a strong binding structure suitable for their weighty, limited edition Explorer Series project. The Keoughs solicited prototypes from the following bookbinders: Harcourt Bindery in Boston, MA; Roswell Bookbinding in Phoenix, AZ; and Felton Bookbinding in Georgetown, Ontario. The Keoughs ultimately worked with Keith Felton, who developed a custom binding for Antarctica by combining the techniques of a classic European leather binding and a split-board ledger binding.

In addition to the iterative prototypes or "dummies" for Antarctica, each box contains typewritten specifications and subsequent evaluations by the Keoughs. For more detailed Antarctica production notes, see also Box 12.
