Accession 1987-M-071: Additional Material

Series I: Family Papers

1760-1986

The addition carries the Alsop Family Papers into the twentieth century and primarily documents the lives of three family members and their presence in Connecticut state politics. Material on two of the family members, Corinne Robinson Alsop (1886-1971) and John Alsop (1915-2000), is only found in this addition.

Joseph W. Alsop (1876-1953), known as "the Squire of Avon," was a member of the Yale Class of 1898 and a "gentleman farmer," raising cattle and tobacco on his farm, Wood Ford, in Avon. Mr. Alsop served as the first selectman from Avon for many years and as state representative from the town from 1907 to 1909. He also served as a state senator from 1909 to 1911.

His wife, Corinne Robinson Alsop, was a niece of President Theodore Roosevelt and a cousin of Eleanor Roosevelt and Alice Roosevelt Longworth. She served on many Republican committees and formed the first group to give women recognition in the Connecticut Republican Party before they had won the right to vote. In 1924 she was elected to a two-year term in the Connecticut State House of Representatives, making her the first female Roosevelt to hold an elected office. Refusing to cross party lines to support her cousin Franklin Roosevelt's run for the presidency, Mrs. Alsop made the daring move to second the nomination of his opponent, Alf Landon, at the 1936 Republican National Convention.

Their youngest son, John Alsop, an insurance executive in Hartford, was the Republican candidate in the 1962 Connecticut gubernatorial race. He lost the election to John Dempsey.

At the beginning of the series, the General portion includes a substantial collection of recipe books and cards belonging to several Alsop women. Materials thereafter are arranged alphabetically by individual. Corinne Alsop's personal correspondence, primarily letters received from her husband Joseph W. Alsop (1876-1953), comprise the bulk of her papers. Mrs. Alsop's correspondence additionally includes letters from her friend, actress Ruth Draper, and updates on her children from the nanny, Agnes Guthrie. All correspondence-related folders contain both incoming and outgoing letters and are arranged chronologically.

The papers of Joseph W. Alsop (1876-1953) consist of fairly routine personal papers and Connecticut State Senate reports from 1909 pertaining to his service on the Roads and Bridges Committee. Photographs, printed material, correspondence, political cartoons, clippings, and ephemera document the gubernatorial run of John Alsop in 1962. The majority of these materials are photographs, the bulk of which are campaign shots taken by professional photographers. They include posed photographs of the Alsop family and candid shots of John Alsop meeting and greeting his constituents at fundraisers and other functions. The series also includes World War I paraphernalia of Joseph W. Alsop's (1876-1953) brother, John deKoven Alsop (1879-1926).

	The photographs are arranged by individual. Many are unlabeled and unidentified and are assumed to depict members of the Alsop family over three generations. Oversized photographs are located in their appropriately sized boxes and are cross-referenced. The photographs encompass a variety of subjects, from portraiture of members of the Alsop family and childhood photographs of Corinne Robinson Alsop, to group photographs of Joseph W. Alsop's (1876-1953) class at Yale University. Several photographs of the Alsop's farm, Wood Ford, are also included. Photographs relating to John Alsop's 1962 gubernatorial campaign are in Series I.

	This small collection of correspondence between members of the Roosevelt family is arranged alphabetically and includes letters from Theodore Roosevelt, Sr. to his wife, Mittie, as well as the correspondence of Corinne Alsop's mother, Corinne Roosevelt Robinson. Also included are personal letters written by her sister, Anna "Bamie" Roosevelt Cowles, and childhood friend and wife of President Theodore Roosevelt, Edith Kermit Carow Roosevelt. Many of these letters deal with their respective family and social lives; the handwriting is difficult to read.
