Biographical / Historical

Edward John Kempf (1885-1972), American psychiatrist, psychologist, psychopathologist and author, is known primarily for his pioneer work in the development of psychosomatic medicine and for his theory that the human personality is a product of biological evolution. He received an A. B. from Indiana University in 1907 and an M. D. from Western Reserve in 1910. From 1911-1912 he worked at Indianapolis State Hospital applying the Freudian passive free association method to the treatment of schizophrenic young women. According to Dr. Kempf's autobiographical notes:

"They were the first cases of schizophrenia (divided mind) treated by psychoanalytic methods in American psychiatric hospitals, who recovered from the disease and reintegrated normal egoistic self-control of social behavior with insight into causes of their emotional conditions. These cases directly controverted Freud's dogma that all cases of dementia praecox are incurable and progressively deteriorating."

Thus, Dr. Kempf was both early to use and to criticize Freudian teachings.

From 1912 to 1914 Dr. Kempf served as a staff physician at Phipps Psychiatric Clinic, at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. In 1913 he married Helen Dorothy Clarke, a graduate of Johns Hopkins Medical School. Between 1914 and 1920 he served as a clinical psychiatrist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D. C. and, during this period, published Autonomic Functions and the Personality (1918). From 1920 to 1931 he engaged in private practice in New York and Santa Barbara.

In 1923 Dr. Kempf met with Sigmund Freud in the Austrian Tyrolean Alps. The two psychiatrists discussed their respective theories of the personality and methods of dealing with schizophrenia. In the Life and Confessions of a Psychologist (1923), G. Stanley Hall said of Freud and the young Kempf:

"Freud and his orthodox disciples concerned themselves solely with the psychic, ignoring the somatic structures and functions, which later Kempf, the only American who has done signal creative work in the field, has sought to supply."

Dr. Kempf consistently advocated a "more active method" (than the Freudian) of treating selected cases of emotional neuroses and psychoses and continued his systematic development of psychobiology. His research covered more than 2000 cases and dealt with the psychology of schizophrenia. Kempf used the sciences of biology, genetics, embryology, physiology, psychology, sociology, anthropology, physics and chemistry to explain his theory of the human personality as a product of biological evolution.

From 1931 until his death in 1972 Dr. Kempf was actively engaged in research and writing. His last book, Abraham Lincoln's Philosophy of Common Sense: An Analytical Biography of a Great Mind, was published in 1965.

Dr. Kempf was a member of a number of societies, including: the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Medical Association, the American Psychiatric Association, the American Psychoanalytic Society, the American Psychological Association, the American Psychopathological Association, the American Society for Psychical Research, the Cosmos Club, the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York Academy of Sciences, the Pavlovian Society of North America, and the Washington Psychoanalytic Society.

The collection is divided into three series. The CORRESPONDENCE series contains letters to and from Edward Kempf and spans the years 1912-1972. Unfortunately, a large part of Dr. Kempf's correspondence — including his correspondence with Sigmund Freud — apparently no longer exists. A significant amount of correspondence with psychologists and psychiatrists such as William C. Menninger, Adolph Meyer and Gardner Murphy remains. The WRITINGS AND RESEARCH MATERIALS series consists of published and unpublished articles by Dr. Kempf and drafts of manuscripts. The manuscripts are, successively, Evolution of the Personality (in four drafts); Bisexual Differentiation (in two drafts, a work which appears to be related to but separate from Evolution of the Personality); and, Maturation of Man (in three drafts; Maturation of Man is a revision of Evolution of the Personality).

The Edward J. Kempf Papers were the gift of Mrs. Edward J. Kempf in 1974.

Scope and Contents

Series II: WRITINGS AND RESEARCH MATERIALS, 1911-1959*7 linear feet (16 boxes)*

The WRITINGS AND RESEARCH MATERIALS series includes reprints of Edward J. Kempf's published articles, a number of unpublished articles, and an imperfect copy of his monograph, The Autonomic Functions and the Personality. The series consists primarily of drafts of manuscripts. The manuscripts are, successively, Evolution of the Personality (in four drafts); Bisexual Differentiation (in two drafts, a work which appears to be related to but separate from Evolution of the Personality); and, Maturation of Man (in three drafts; Maturation of Man is a revision of Evolution of the Personality). In addition, one folder following the manuscripts contains references central to all drafts. A section of miscellaneous chapters and notes which do not seem to be a part of any manuscript completes the series.

The series is arranged sequentially in the above order.
