CALL NUMBER: MS 522

CREATOR: Verstille family

TITLE: Verstille family papers

DATES: 1754-1858

PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION: 3.5 linear feet (2 boxes, 1 folio)

LANGUAGE: English

SUMMARY: The principal figures in these papers are Peter Verstille of Wethersfield and Hartford, Connecticut, his wife Naomi Ridgway Verstille, their children and grandchildren. Most of the papers consist of correspondence, but also included are financial and legal papers, among them accounts of the estate of Peter Verstille and lists of house furnishings. The largest part of the correspondence is the exchange of letters between Nancy and Charlotte Verstille, granddaughters of Peter Verstille. Both were teachers and discuss their experiences at schools in various parts of New England and the South. The letters of Nancy Verstille also include an account of an operation performed in 1817. The Dabney family of Massachusetts were major correspondents and their letters contain a description of the bankruptcy of the family in 1818.

Scope and Contents

The papers, 1754-1858, of the Verstille family of Connecticut consist largely of correspondence, although some business and financial papers are also included. The approximately 600 letters are arranged by family member. Each item and all correspondents are listed in the register.

The papers of the merchant Peter Verstille of Wethersfield and Hartford, Connecticut, and his wife Naomi (Ridgway) Verstille consist of letters from business associates and family members, dealing almost entirely with business matters. One particularly interesting letter comes to Verstille from Enoch Brown (1778 May 12), announcing his decision to sell a favorite slave due to anti-slavery agitation in Boston.

There is a small amount of family and business correspondence of Peter and Naomi's daughter-in-law Eliza Verstille and of her sons William, Tristram, and Seldon, and daughter-in-law Rebecca, but the largest portion of the collection by far is made up of the correspondence of Eliza's daughters Nancy and Charlotte. These are letters which the two sisters exchanged with each other, with family members, and with friends, especially members of the Dabney family of Salem, Massachusetts, during the first half of the nineteenth century. Charlotte taught at the Franklin Academy in Andover, Massachusetts, for some years, and then at a variety of places in New England and the South, as did Nancy, and their activities at their various schools are a frequent topic in their letters. Other often-discussed matters are Charlotte's determination to stay single and devote herself to teaching and religion, news of family and friends, church and social events, and the health of the sisters. Nancy suffered from a tumor that was surgically removed in September of 1817, and her letters describe the disease and recovery; there are also several letters from her doctor, John G. Warren. The letters of the Dabneys are concerned with all these matters and with the bankruptcy of their family in 1818, and a host of other family problems. The letters of William Caton to Charlotte describe his journey to Oswego and Sacketts Harbor, New York, and his duties as a naval surgeon before and during the War of 1812.

The collection contains a small amount of correspondence of Naomi Verstille's third husband, Rev. Joseph Perry, largely letters from fellow ministers concerned with church matters. His correspondents include James Dana, Selleck Silliman, and Chauncey Whittelsey. Also among his papers are a sermon, a letter to his son, and a letter to the father of his slave concerning the boy's purchase (1792). The remaining correspondence in the collection consists of letters, many of them unidentified, to others than Verstille family members. The collection is completed by an assortment of bills, receipts, accounts, estate papers, and miscellaneous items such as lists of furnishings and calling cards, arranged chronologically.

Many of the items are in fragile condition and must be handled with care.
